spec·trum (spek′trəm) n., pl. -tra (-trə), -trums [ModL., special use (by NEWTON, 1671) of L. spectrum: see SPECTER] 1. the series of colored bands diffracted and arranged in the order of their respective wavelengths by the passage of white light through a prism or other diffracting medium and shading continuously from red (produced by the longest wave visible) to violet (produced by the shortest) 2. any of various arrangements of colored bands or lines, together with invisible components at both ends of the spectrum (cf. SPECTRUM

As a light spectrum diffracts light which passes through a prism and separates it unto individual bands of color, in a similar way as people pass through life, their experiences separate them into individuals with distinct personalities, likes and dislikes.

A class is a spectrum, reflecting the diversity and the continuous range of interest of a student body. Individuals with common interests form groups and the groups become a part of the spectrum

One end of the spectrum may start with the intellectuals, those who pursue knowledge; then come the pseudo-intellectuals who try to fake it with big words; and the grade-seekers who will willingly get an ulcer for an A; a group who thinks classes are meant to be skipped; some are there for only the social life; those who wear eau-de- cigarette since they are so often in the lavs with a butt; some who are more often outside the building at the tracks than within a classroom; some work harder for a Varsity letter than for the letters on a report card. There are the future Mozarts, Springsteens, Picassos, Redfords, Streisands. Einsteins, Curies, and Kennedys.

The beauty of a spectrum lies in the fact that many groups with distinct qualities come together in a harmonious blend — the class of 79.

Time is not measured by the passing of the years, . . . but by what one achieves.

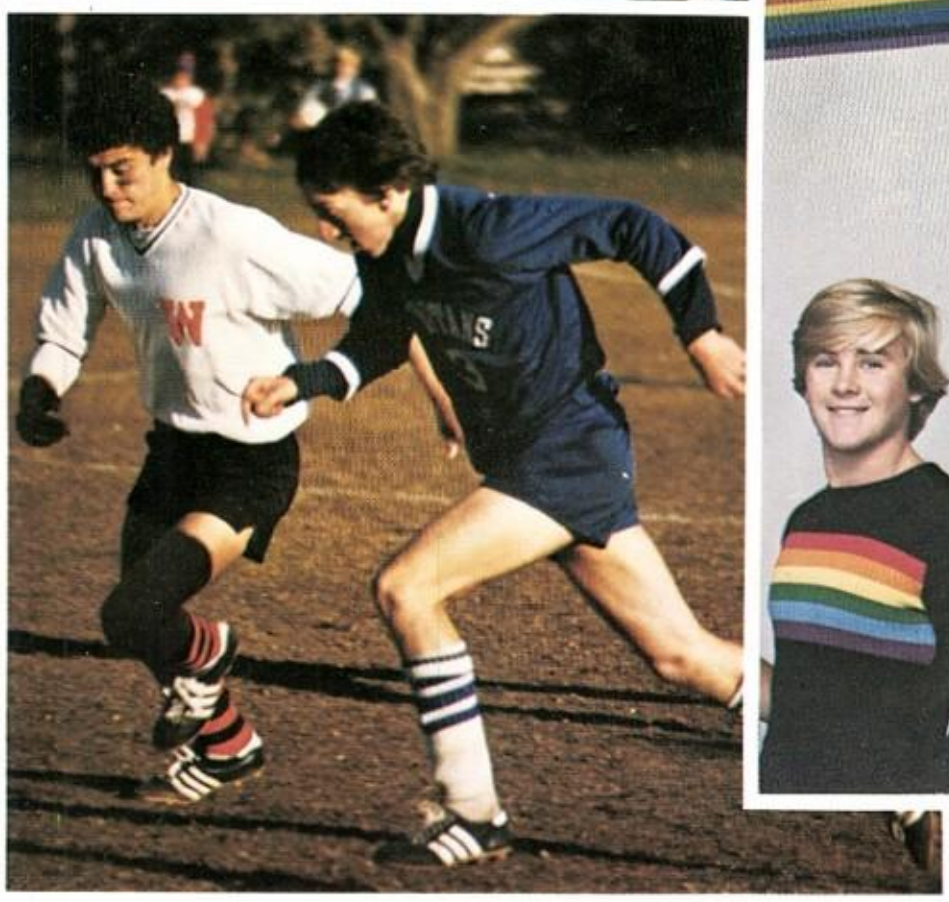
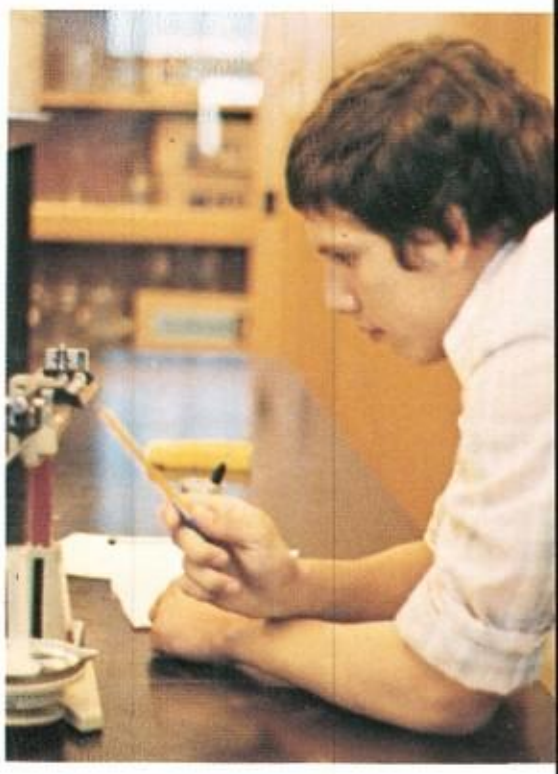
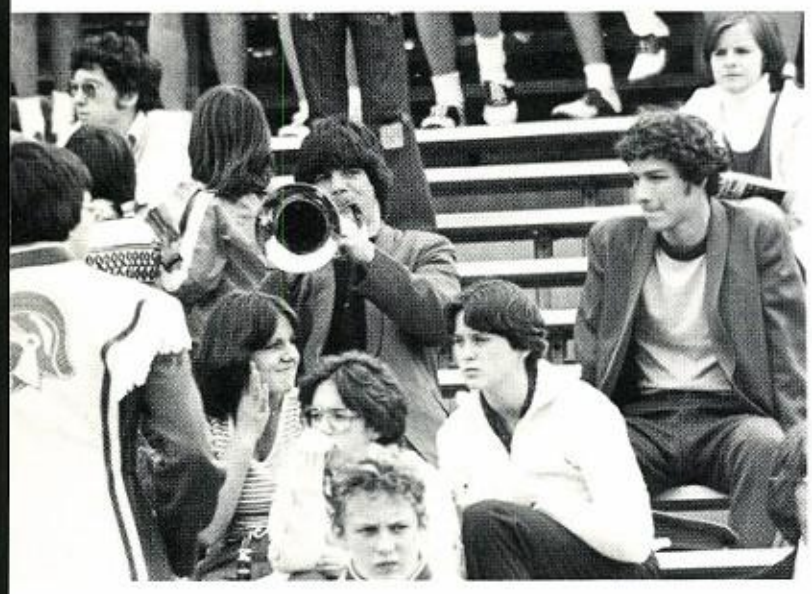
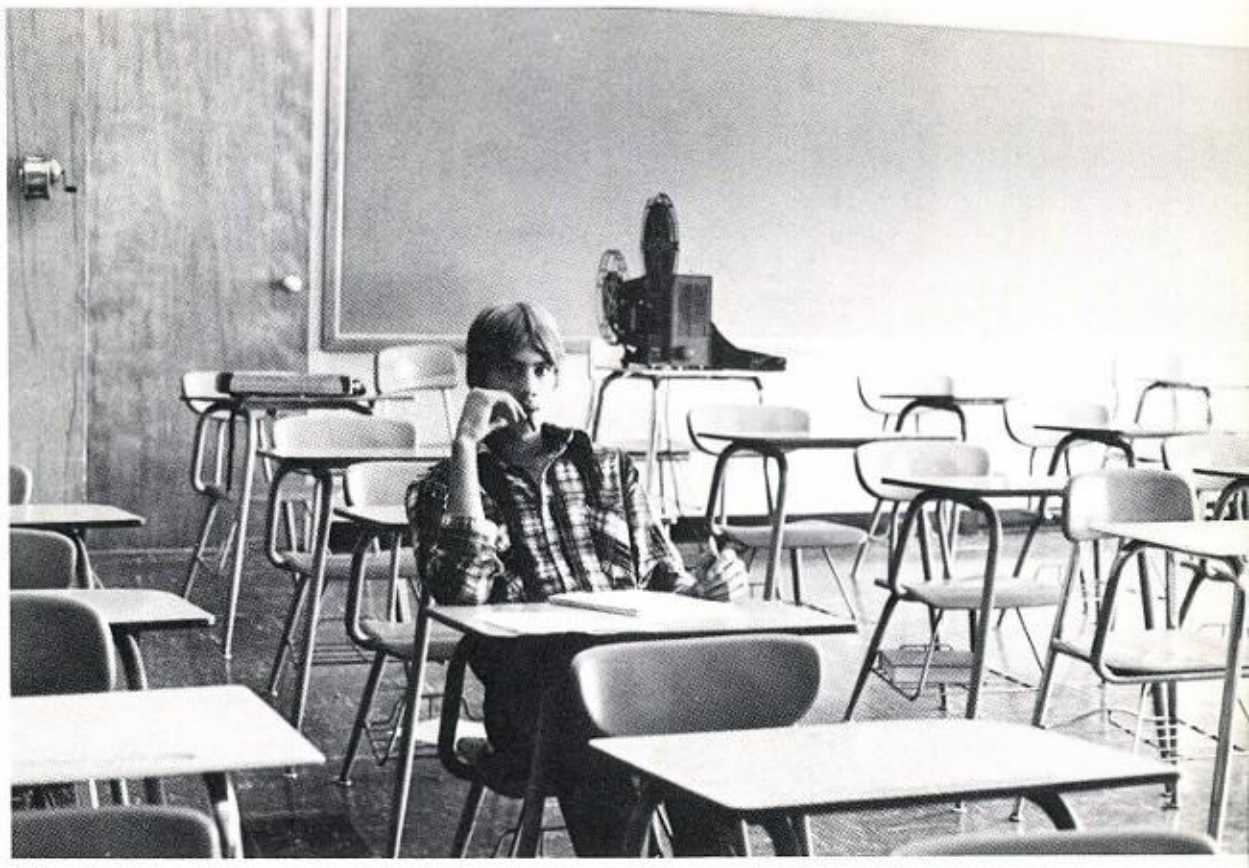
Much of a student's life revolves around school just as the spokes around a wheel.

The Hub . . . The Spokes

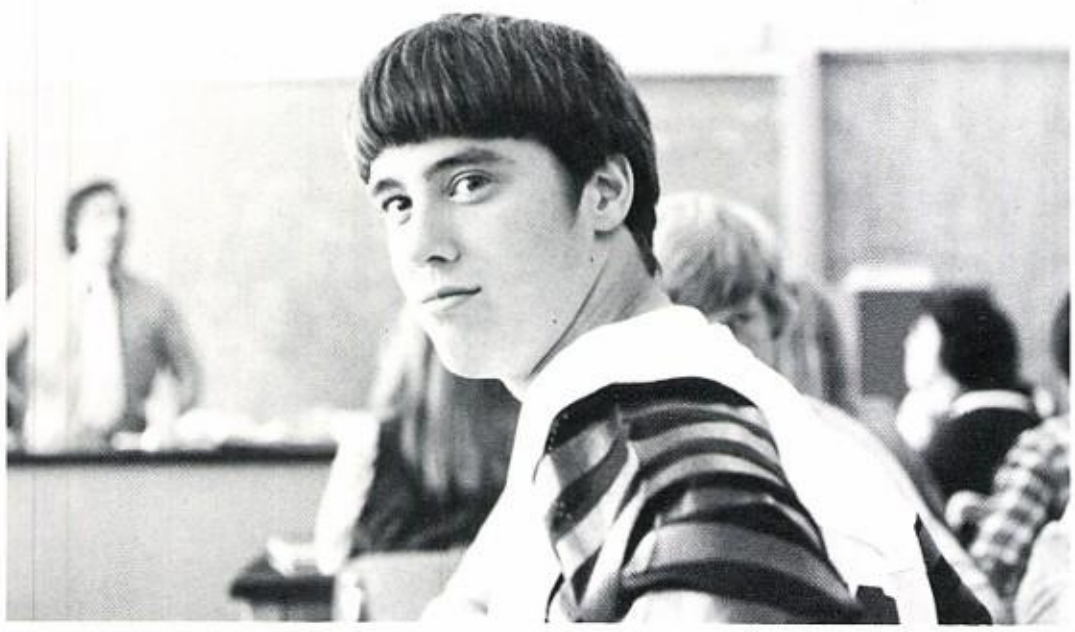








The spectrum of student life begins with the solitude of an empty classroom with only desks and a silent projector for companions — or the uniqueness of being singled out by the camera's eye — or sitting slightly apart as the detached observer of the passing parade.



The Fortress of Solitude . . . A Face in the Crowd

At the opposite end of the Spectrum lies the crowd. Each crowd is as individual as each of it's members, no matter what the reason for the gathering.

Whether it be for studying, recreation or entertainment the crowds that have come together are enjoying each other's company.

Members of the Marching band. David Doucette. Steven Prior. Members of the Drama club. Seniors at work, Tim Angelosanto and Bob Bornstein. Loyal fans. Seniors being entertained. John Brown.

From top left to bottom right: John Ward — was ever such innocence displayed, so many curls so gloriously arrayed; Joanne O'Grady enjoying one of her more exciting classes; Don Manning flipping through his black book to line up his weekend entertainment; David Doucette and Tom Harrigan — Siamese twins connected at the fist and cheek; Alison Leonard curses her Physics homework; Class Couple runners up; The melting pot of Stoneham High.

The 1979 Yearbook began in the spring of 1978 with the selection of a title and theme. "Spectrum" was chosen because it indicates a special effort to include the diversities of people and activities of the Senior class. In keeping with this theme, the Yearbook staff decided to have rainbow colored pages and a variegated cover design. A multi-colored stripe was painted around the school during the summer to promote sales of the book. Also several members of the staff and senior class dressed in spectrum costumes one day to advertise the idea.

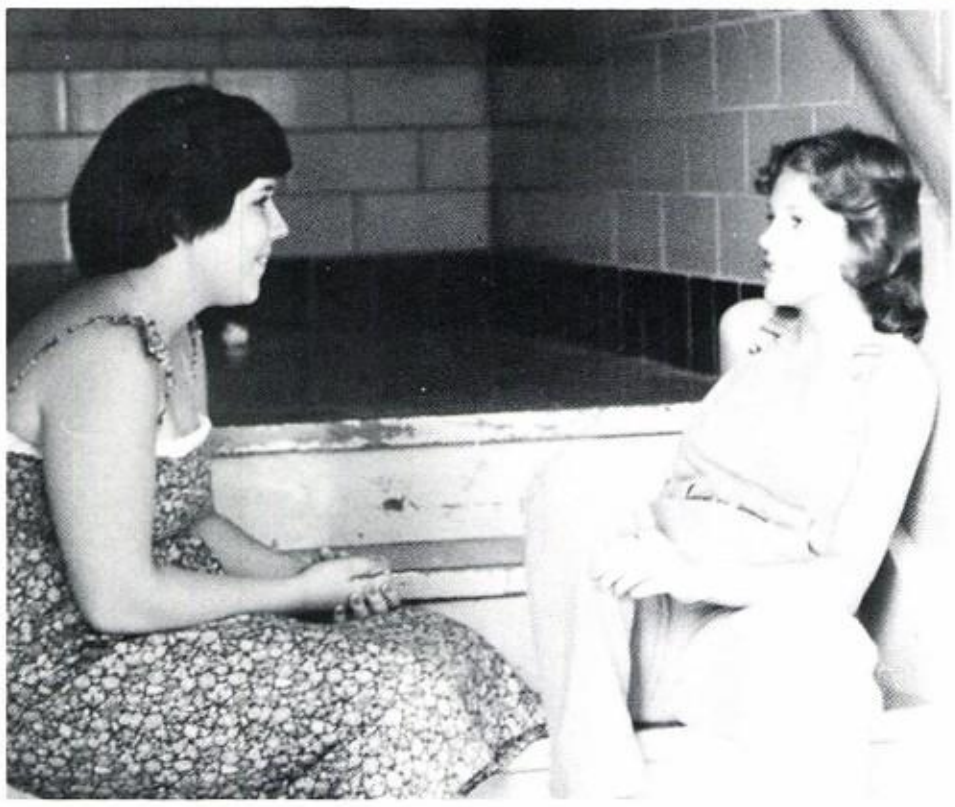
Behind the Scenes

The class of 1979 ranges in height from a petit four foot, nine inches to a towering six feet, six inches. The oldest member of the class was born in 1959, twenty years before high school graduation; the youngest are mere babes born in late December of 1961, making them seventeen long after leaving Stoneham High. Class members come form all over the Boston area, Niagra Falls, New York, Ft. Cambell, Kentucky, Tucon, Arizona, and even as far as Columbia, Costa Rica, Jerusalem, and West Germany. The class is a balance of intellectuals, athletes, organizers, and flirts all working, taking, and giving to make up the Spectrum of the class of 1979.



After the chice of the theme for the book, the staff set to work on choosing a photographer. They were seeking a studio which would give seniors a good price for graduation portraits and also be available to document various school events. Bids were placed by Purdy Vantine, Loring, and Prestige Studios. Loring was chosen because they offered the most complete service for the least amount of money.

When the students had finished with the initial decisions, they started to work on the book itself. They tackled the opening section first since it had to be finished for an early deadline. Staff members arranged photos and copy, measuring each area accurately. Finally, on November 1, 1978, that section, and the cover were ready for publication.

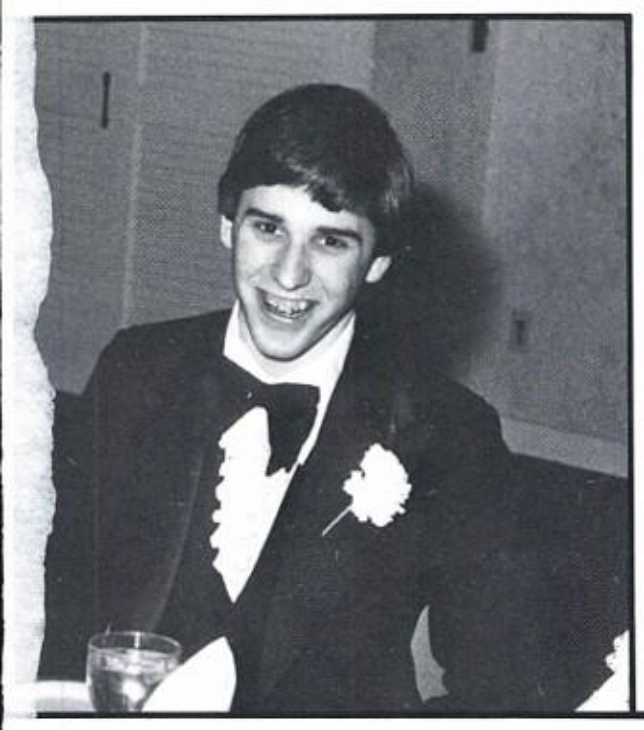
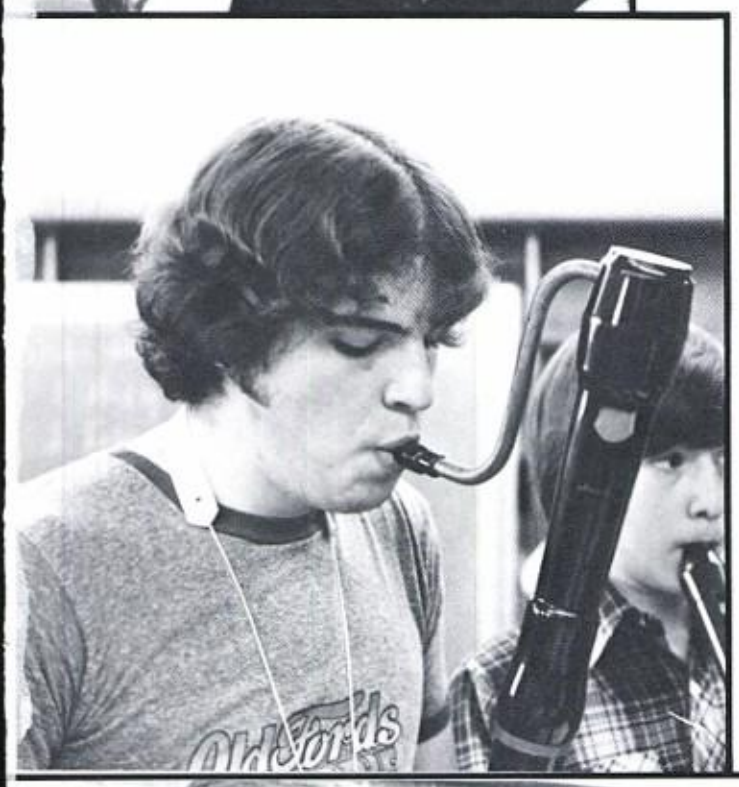
Senior Achievement





The Spectrum of achievement in the class of 1979 ranges far and wide. In Cinncinati, Dan Salera won the national junior pair figure skating championship while locally, Terese Kwiatkowski in girls' basketball, Jack Belcher on boys' basketball, and Bill McDonough in hockey were top scorers in the league. Sam Earle won two gold medal awards in soft sculpture at the Montserrat art show; Diane Selander, Michael Bain and Paul Perry were chosen for the all-district chorus. In college acceptances Alison Leonard is champion with early acceptances from both Harvard and Yale; also receiving early acceptances are Stephen Hardy from Bowdoin, Christine Petto from Renssalaer Polytechnic Institute and Chris Chambers from West Point. Finally, Gerry Mahoney and Patty Morely were selected as king and queen of the 1979 anniversary Carnival Ball.

F. Calvert Bacon
1945-1978

Cal Bacon, a man of great intelligence and personality, was not only a fantastic teacher, but a friend to all students. He was a critic and owner of thousands of books which he gladly loaned to students.

As a sportsman, he jogged five miles daily and played golf. As a teacher, he not only provided knowledge in Latin and English, but also his own personal views and attitudes to help make a day interesting.

Rondular

Sometimes I get the feeling that I am looking ahead to what I have been,
Rather than to what I am going to be,
And, God help me, I am frightened.

Life isn't supposed to be a circle;
it's a line going from birth to death,
a simple, logical convergence of fate
and fact until we fall into the abyss.
Lately, though, the problem is growing deeper, the answers not so ready, the choices not so refined.
The unknown has entered, the great not-to-be explained that throws the whole into chaos.

The line is bending into a circle, and what was felt then has returned and I am tormented by the strain.
How can I look for a line when I keep seeing a circle, and how can I hope to be something, when I keep becoming what I was.

Rondular: Part II

Even circles have points on them, places where everything before is also somehow after. What matter what the point signifies.
Life, death, a love gained or lost,
a friend discovered, a heart broken or mended . . .

The problem comes, though, when the discovery
of the circle is abrupt, unexpcted.
"This can't happen to me," he whispers unconvincingly to himself. "I was there once."

"I have knowledge, now, and maturity, and I am going down the line in a straight and orderly fashion;" such is the folly of reason.

Did you ever hear the one about the old meddling dreamer who couldn't have what he wanted most?

He always wanted to joust with windmills speak beautiful phrases, and save a beautiful lady from who knows what forms of threatening dangers.
In middle life he became a boy, or a ranting fool depending on who was asked.

You see, he had discovered the point in the circle, and had wondered at it, not knowing whether it was right or wrong, only that he burned from both forms of fire; the fire of love and the fire of retribution.

Rondular: Part III
Circle: The consuming image,
the self-destroyer, the self-creator.
Traversed in darkness and blindness it only leads to and from itself . . .

Well, I can tell it to you straight: one of these days I am going to straighten it out.
I am going to break the circle, get things going in a line again maybe. Then she will see, or I will see, or others or perhaps nobody.

It really matters, this business of lines and circles; the soul recoils from uncertainty and seeks to know what is what, that straight is straight and round is round and love is . . . well, who knows, anyway.
Better stick with the windmills and the illusions, the dream and the fire, and let the line take care of itself, along with growing old, growing up, and dying.

Rev. Forrest White
1929-1979

The Reverend Forest White had an extraordinary interest in the quality of life in Stoneham with particular interest in its youth. He served as president of the Stoneham Council of Churches; he was a member of the Stoneham School Committee for six years, and served for two years as its chairman. Mr. White was chosen to be delegate to the White House Conference on Youth at the invitation of President Eisenhower.

His tireless enthusiastic support and appreciation of student activities stands as a model for those who aspire to positions of leadership in relation to the youth of Stoneham. No significant student achievement went unnoticed; his was a supportive and encouraging presence. In a time of contracting horizons and shrinking visions the expansiveness of his spirit stands as a measure of what we should expect of ourselves and offer to others.

Italian Makes Debut

During this year many changes took place in the Foreign Language Department, chief among which was the introduction of the highly popular Italian program. New to the staff is Latin instructor Mrs. Ruggiero. The extra-curricular Spanish and Italian clubs continue to flourish.

A Drum, a drum! The English Department Doth Come.

From Shakespeare to Freud, the Stoneham High student is exposed to an array of aesthetic electives. Courses like Literature and Psychology and British Literature provide material for the student who enjoys reading and literary analysis. For those people who like to combine their hobbies with their english courses, Sports literature, Film Media and Science Fiction and Mystery, exemplify some of the "fun" electives offered. Minors like Journalism and Yearbook Workshop provide experience for people who may plan to pursue a career in this field. Creative Writing and Public Speaking are courses that stimulate personal expression. The fine staff of the English department have provided an enriching and enjoyable learning experience.

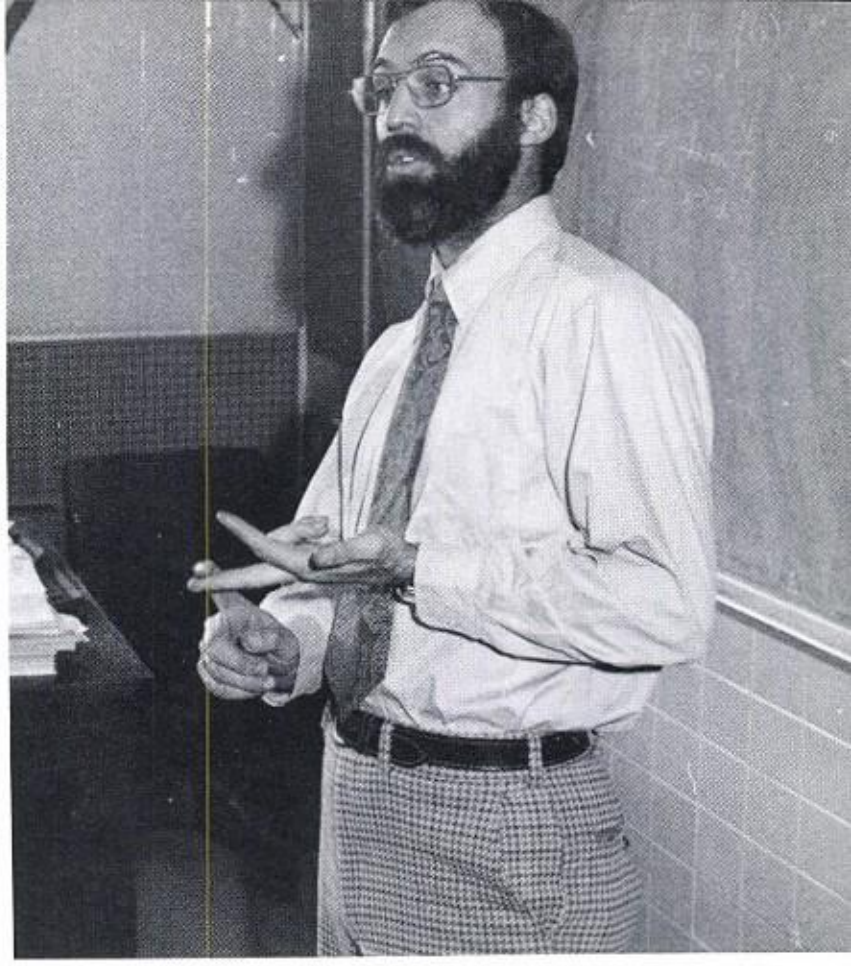
Measuring up to our Expectations



The math department offers four categories of courses — traditional, advanced, review, and computer. Many students elect the traditional sequence of Algebra and Geometry. Some of these people go on to take advanced courses like trigonometry and calculus while others who prefer to review what they have already learned enroll in such classes as CEEB review math. The fourth type of math course, computer programming, is becoming increasingly popular.

There is Scientific Method to Their madness

The study of atomic minutiae and the examination of human physiology, exemplify the range of exciting electives provided by the dynamic Science department.

The science staff is attempting to broaden the fields of interest by providing an array of courses, from Introduction to Medical Science to Chemistry Magic.

Mini courses in C.P.R. training and other such health programs have aided in stirring student awareness in the health/science fields.

In The Business Field

Just as in past years, the Business Education Department offers practical courses which instruct students in skills which can be used by everyone later in life. The main subject taught is typing, a skill useful to every student, no matter what their future plans. Personal Typing I and II are offered for those who want a firm foundation in typing without worrying about speed. For those who wish to work in the busines world, after graduation, there are also courses in bookkeeping, shorthand, business law and similar subjects. The dpeartment provides students with a good background in traditionally important courses.

Not Just History Anymore

All the courses in the social studies department today share two common goals. The first one involves the establishment of relationships between students of varying backgrounds. The class structure is such that a heterogenious group of students shares various points of view, and a shared gain of knowledge is the result.

The second goal of the department is an attempt to make people think, and form the skills of decision making. Importance has been taken off "when" and placed on the "why" of history. In analyzing history in such a way, students acquire skills that can be used for a life time.

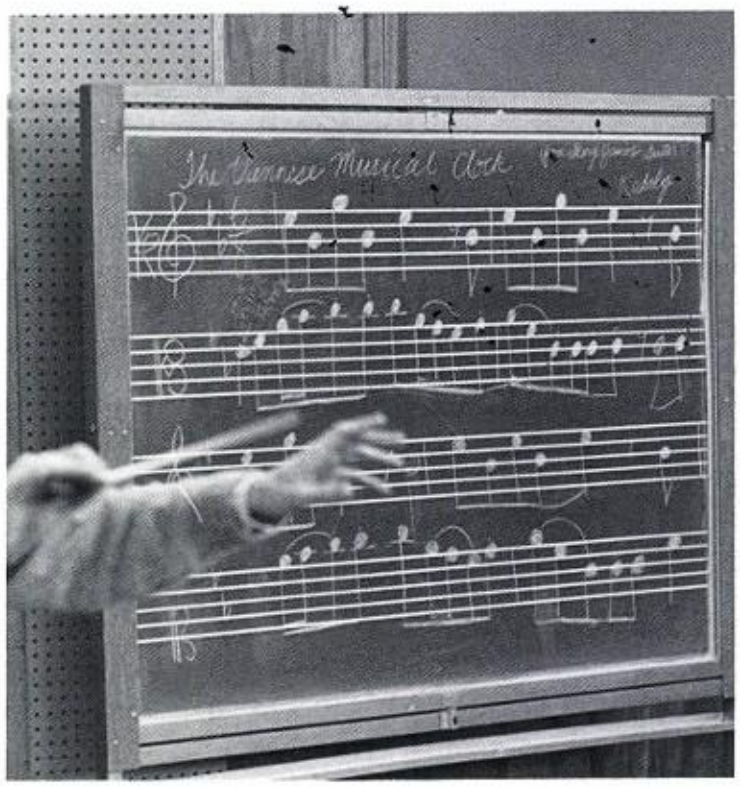
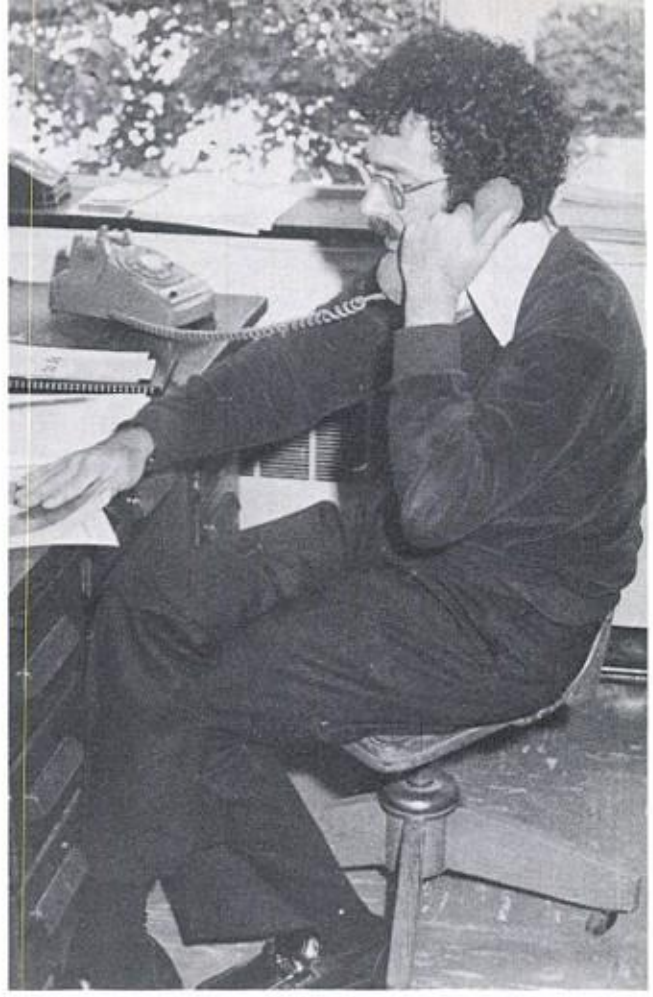
Artistically Preserving Moments and Ideas

Ted Schwaib, Marie Cargill, Program Supervisor.

Art students at Stoneham High are instructed in both the fine arts and in crafts; they study the old masters as well as using their own imaginations in non-traditional media. Through a variety of projects, talented students can develop their skills, and people who aren't quite as gifted can use their free periods in constructive ways. This year, art majors experimented in contour drawing and advertising logos while other students made such items as leather belts, chessboards and plaster masks.

Up with Music





The music curriculum at S.H.S. is handled by three talented teachers. The head of the department is Mr. Abrahams. Mr. Abrahams also directs the Spartan Chorale and advises the other two music teachers in the department. The first is Ms. Wienski who teaches piano and music theory as well as directing the Reporatory Chorus and Collegium Musicum. The other, a new face at Stoneham High is Mr. Walter. His new and original ideas have helped to improve both the Concert and Jazz ensembles.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS

Industrial arts offers students the chance to acquire practical manual skills which enable them to enter many fields of employment. Some of these courses include Woodworking, Printing, Mechanical Drawing, Auto Mechanics, and Electricity. The educational development of students is based on their individual talents, educational opportunities, and occupational opportunities. Most importantly, Industrial Arts prepares students for facing the world after graduation. Pictured from left to right: Industrial Arts instructors Mr. Paolini, Mr. Leuci, Mr. Burke.

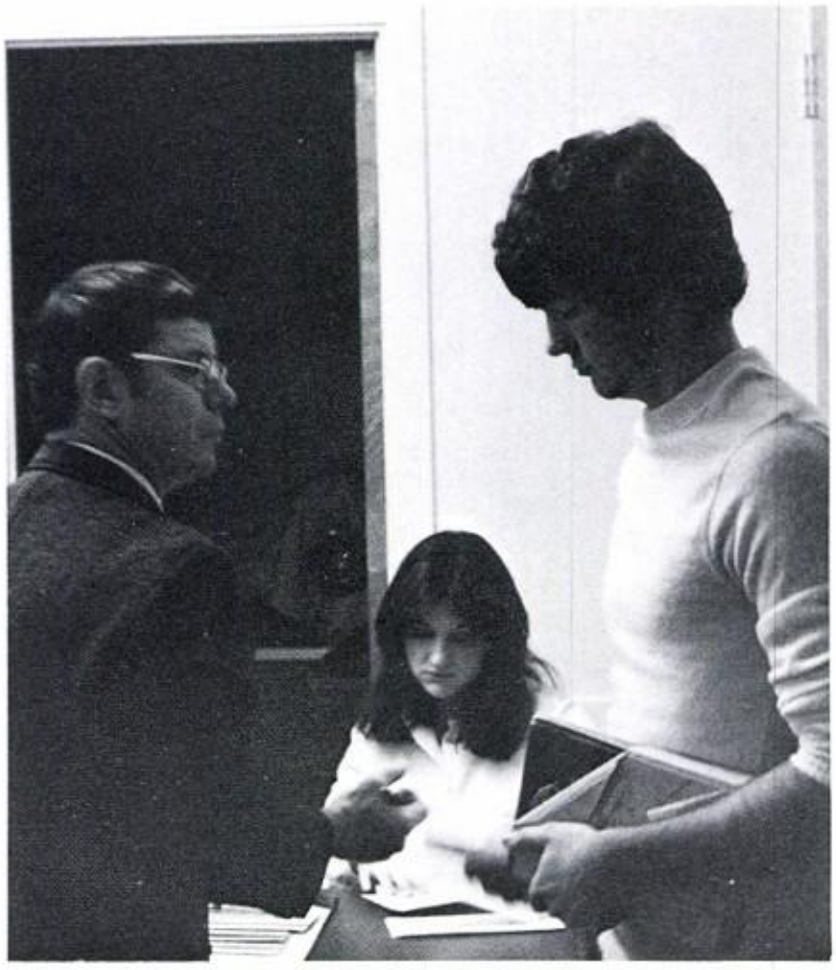
The Teacher as a Cult Hero



When a school has a moderate enrollment such as ours, it is common-place for students and teachers to become well acquainted. Educators are often looked upon as respected scholars, and students are sometimes seen as eager underlings. These are accepted facts, but the careful observer sees more, yes, much more, in many instances.

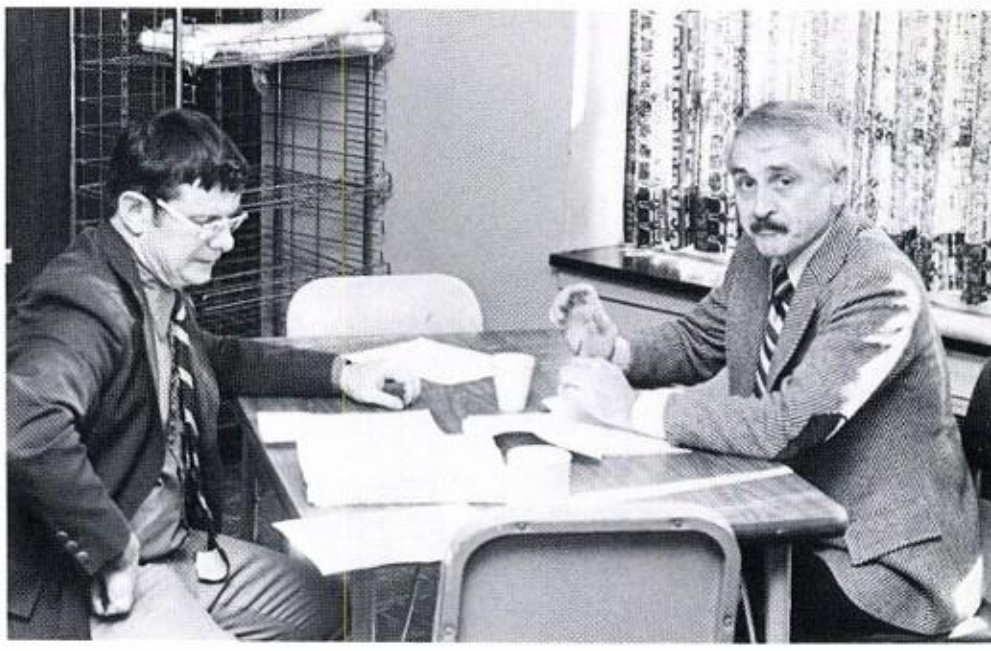
Some would say that a select handful of teachers are on a higher than average rung of the admiration ladder. One could almost call this chosen few "cult heroes." It requires a keen, well-trained eye to spot these cult leaders, each with his own unique following, but it can be done!

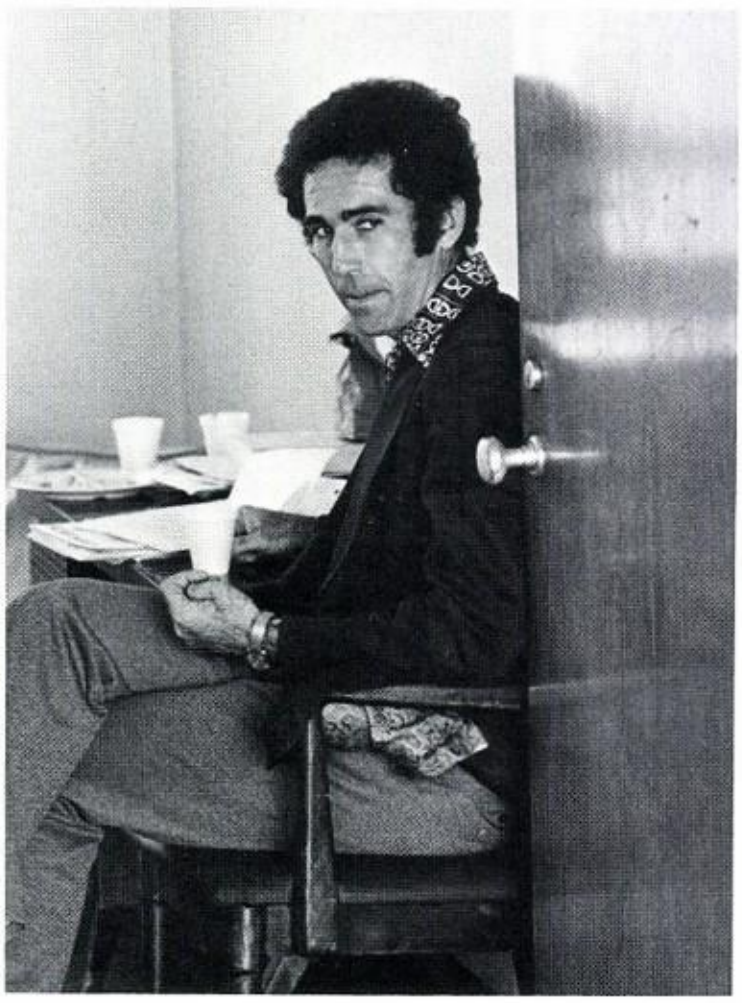
A common denominator among these mentors is their overpowering charisma, that abstract quality that evokes admiration, or even in some cases blind worship. What kind of person is a cult worshipper you say? Observe the faces around you: He's the person in front of you in the lunch line, beside you in health class; any striving impressionable soul is a potential cult hero worshipper.

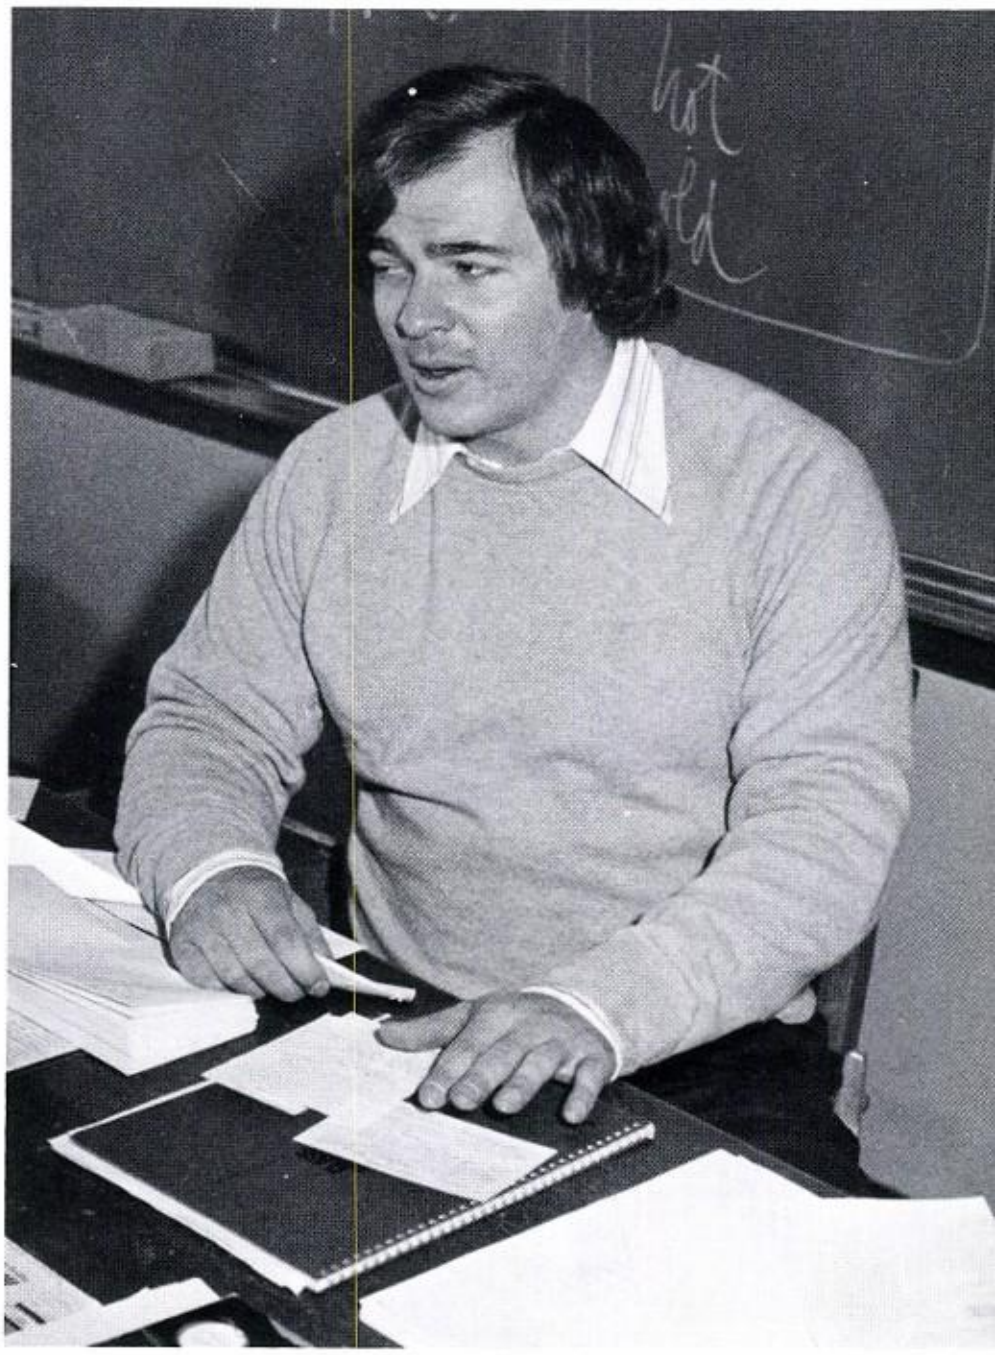
If you suspect someone of membership in this select group, but you are not sure, ask yourself the following questions: Is he/she often seen with a glazed look while doing homework for a certain class? Does he/she begin to increasingly look like a certain faculty member? Does an individual often find himself in certain classrooms, not remembering how he arrived there? Will he/she surrender up hard-earned money to pay a teacher fan club ad? Does she precede specific faculty member about school dropping crushed rose petals in his path?

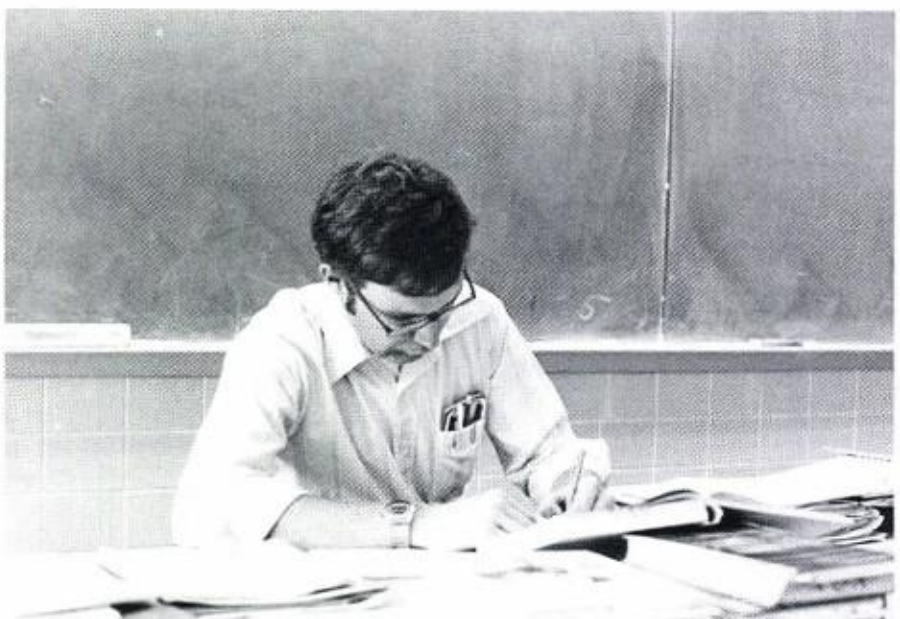
If the answer is yes to any of these questions, there is a strong possibility that you have a cult-hero follower. But not to worry; your friend is not alone and his affliction is often cured by the two relaxing months of summer vacation. After all distance often makes charisma fade to a faint memory that only the impulse nostalgia can revive.

The whole is equal . . .









to the sum of its parts.

The year 1979 marked the Golden Anniversary of the Carnival Ball. The winter carnival, originating over 50 years ago, included a week long chain of events that ended in a night of entertainment and the crowning of the king and queen. Highlighting this week were skiing and snow shoe races at Unicorn Golf course, skating at Kimball's Pond, and a bonfire after the hockey game between the rival Stoneham and Reading teams. Fifty years later, the Carnival Ball with its king, queen, royal court, and variety show still remains for the enjoyment of the townspeople. To celebrate the anniversary of this time honored occasion was to re-introduce the kings and queens who had reigned in Carnival Balls past.

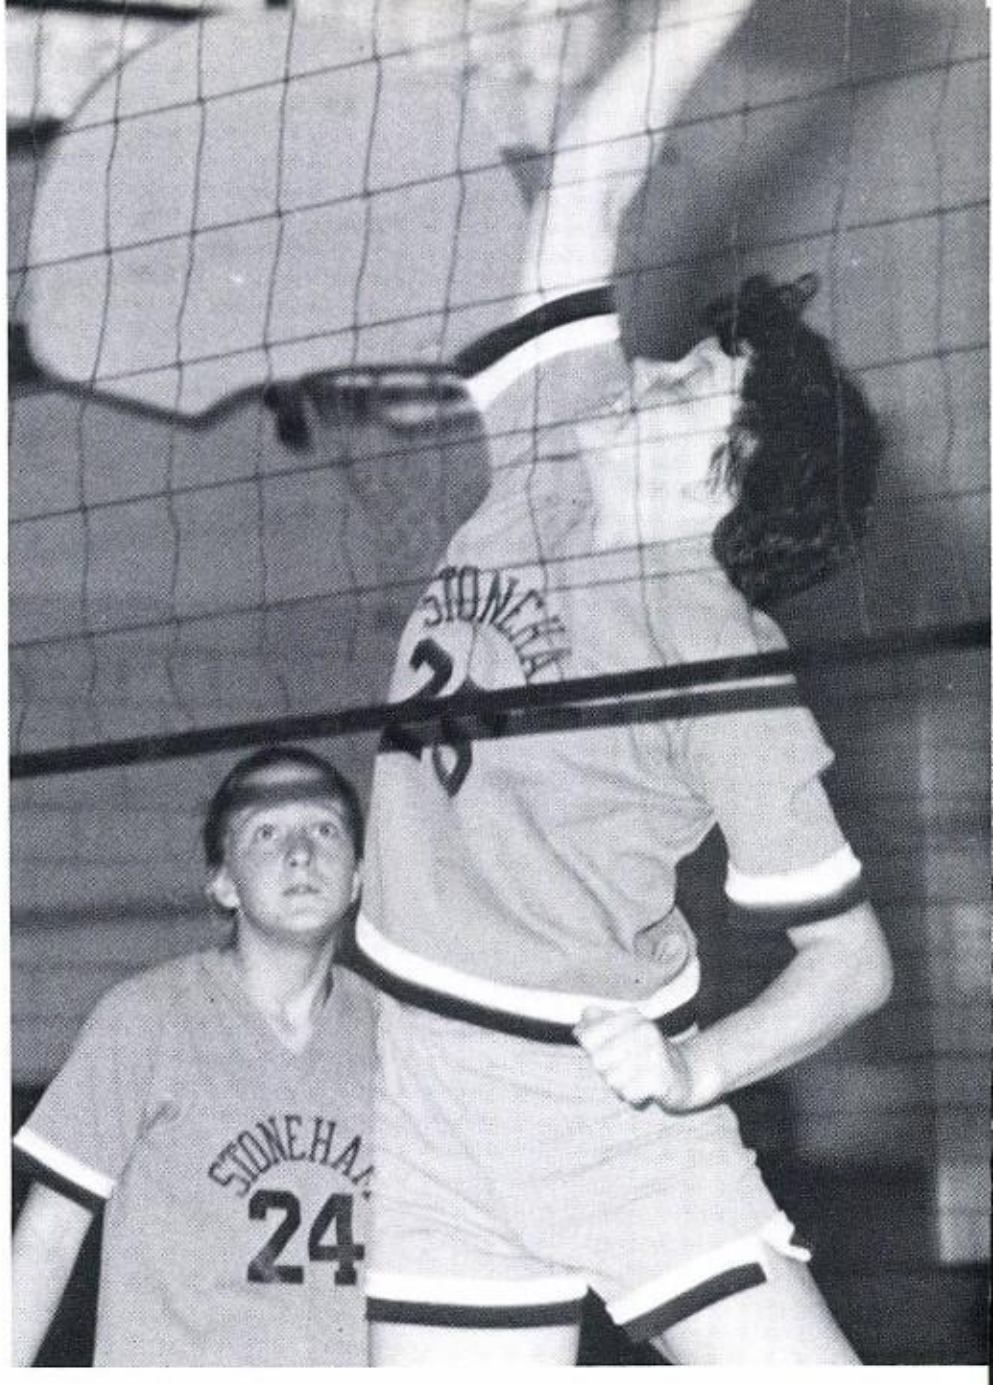
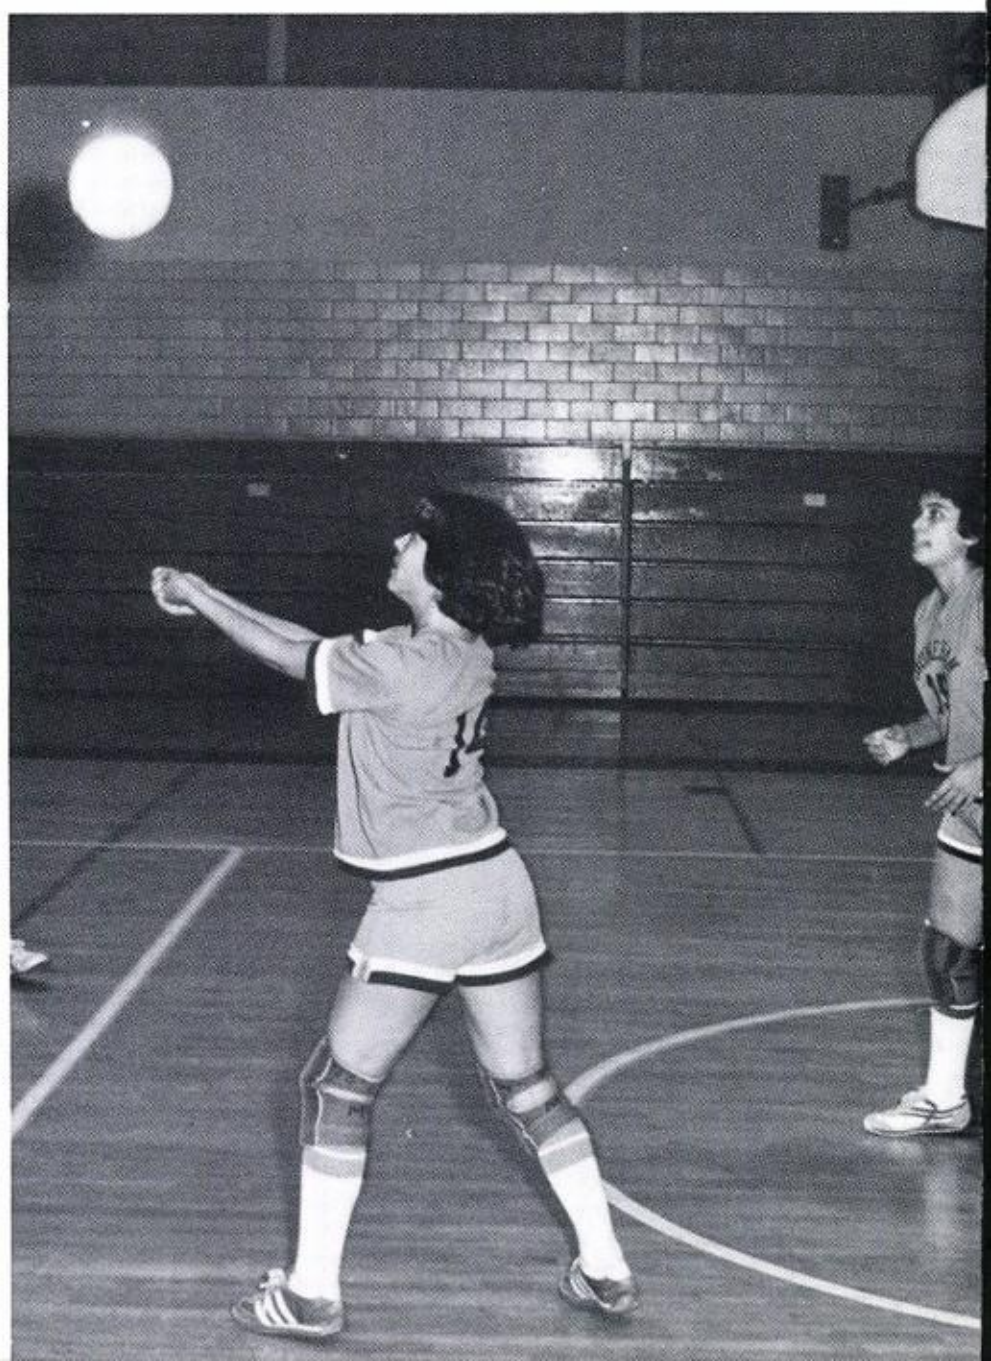
Spikers Get Spiked



After a tremendous first season, the girl spikers experienced the opposite end of the sports spectrum, as they stumbled to a 5-9 record. Captains Pam Branson and Patty De Cola provided stimulating leadership to the team, which was suffering greatly from the loss of last year's senior squad. Nevertheless, the Spartans did a fine job and bumped off many tough opponents.



Maria Covino executes a perfect bump to win a point. Donna-Jean Aruda shows the opponent that we have an aggressive team. Pauline Bryant pulls through with an excellent spike. Julie Zani uses much effort to help win the game. Team watches as Patty Decola sets up the ball for the spike. players to gain a few yards for Stoneham.

Coach Paul White with captain Dana Beane.

After a troubled season last year, the Spartan football team turned in a surprisingly disappointing season this year. At the start of the season, Coach White had high hopes for this team which had many returning varsity players. They battled to a 3-3 record against some tough Middlesex Leagues teams, but then they crumbled and lost three straight to Belmont, Woburn, and Reading. The team played two good games against Belmont and Woburn, but when Thanksgiving rolled around, they again tried unsuccessfully to defeat the less talented Reading team.

This year, the field hockey team performed brilliantly, finishing in third place in the Middlesex League. The most successful field hockey team that Stoneham High has ever had played their first game on September 15 against Winchester. Throughout the entire season, the Spartans trampled over several excellent teams, scoring goals with skill, speed, and spirit. Their greatest victory came when they conquered Reading, their traditional rival, in the last game of the season. Although the team consisted of many athletic seniors, skillful juniors and sophomores will return next year, triumphantly trying to match this years record.

For the first time in its history, Stoneham High entered a girls varsity Cross-Country team into the Middlesex League. The team finished with an excellent 4-5 record, while the boys finished with a disappointing 1-8 record. The poor season was attributed to the lack of depth on the squad. Despite an overall poor season, Stoneham had three of its runners, Tom Harrigan, Gene Kellogg, and Nancy DeFeo selected as members of the Middlesex League All-Star team.

Golf Team Tees Off For A Winning Season

The Swinging Spartans were under par this year as they stroked their way to a 6-2-1 record. The team was teed off because they putted around for two losses, which wedged them out of the states. They clubbed their way to six decisive victories with the help of some green underclassmen. Coach Rundlett believes that next year's squad will have the championship in the bag.

Boosters are Here

The Spartan cheerleaders and majorettes, with a lavish display of flaming batons and elaborately executed formations and gyrations, inspired this years athletes and fans with a great display of enthusiasm. The girls in the cheery blue uniforms united an otherwise apathetic and oblivious student body. Majorette captain Patty Morley and cheerleader captains Marybeth Murphy and Tina Padur provided inspiring leadership for the squads.

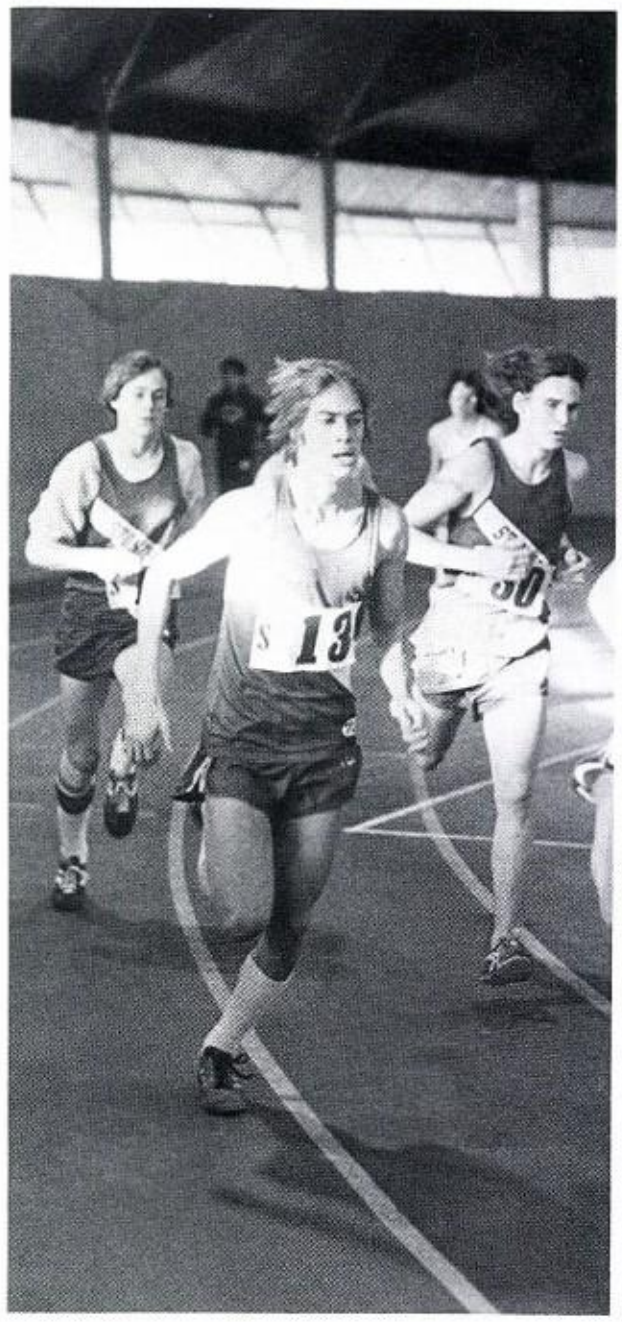
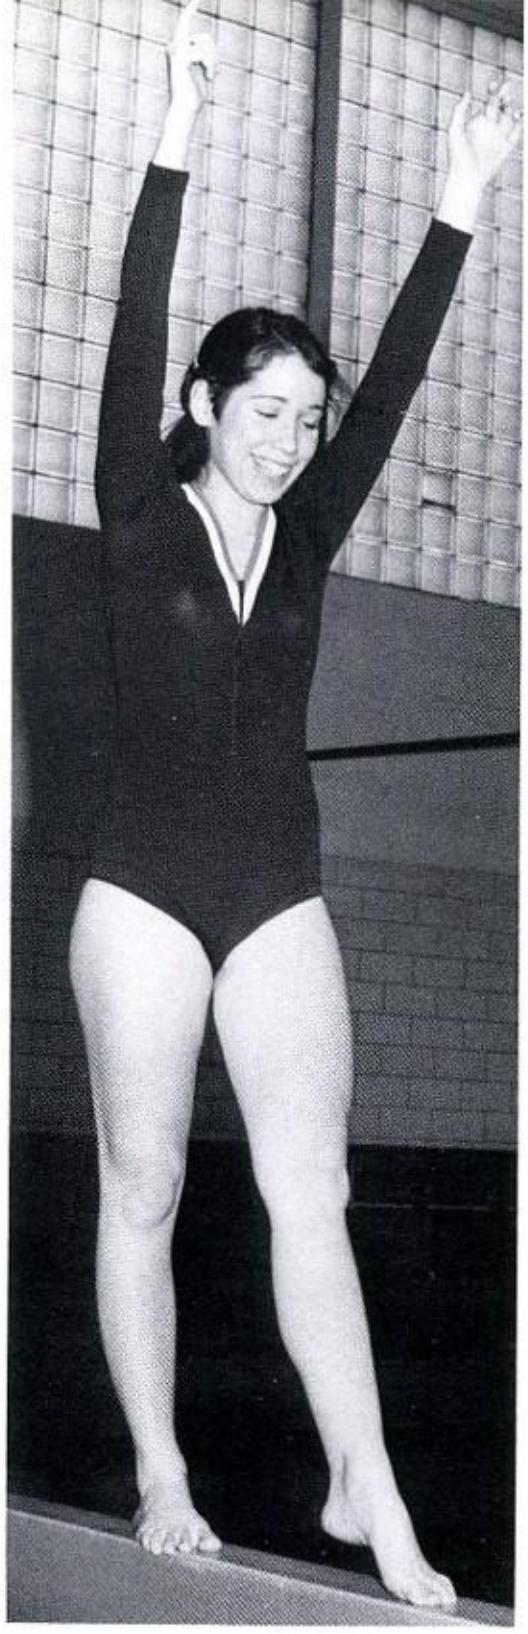
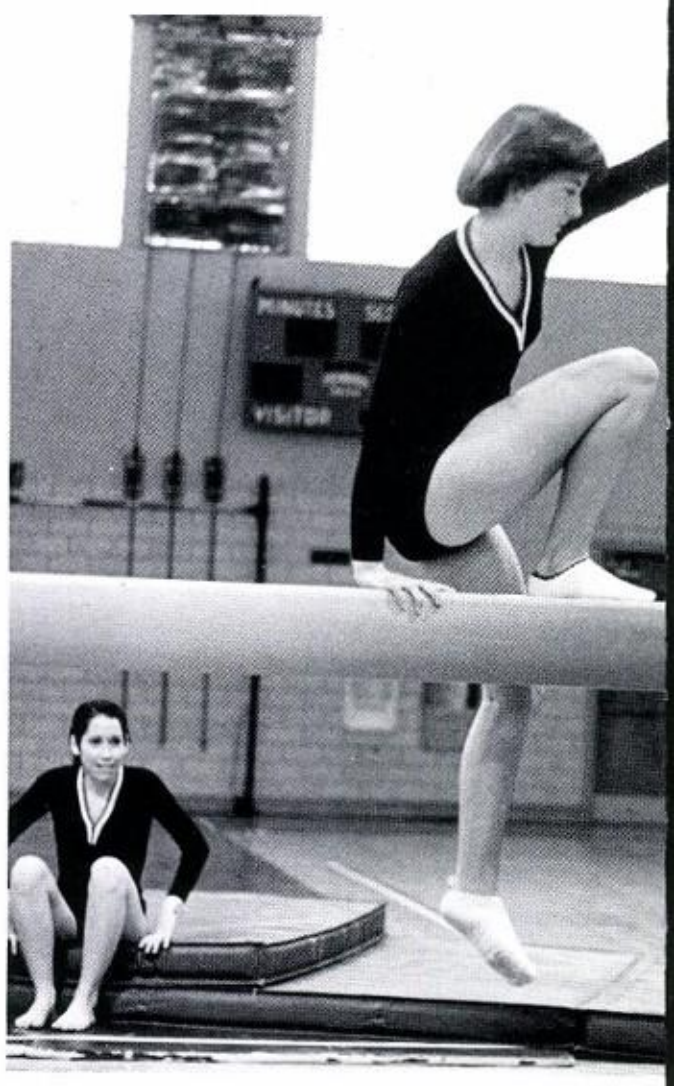
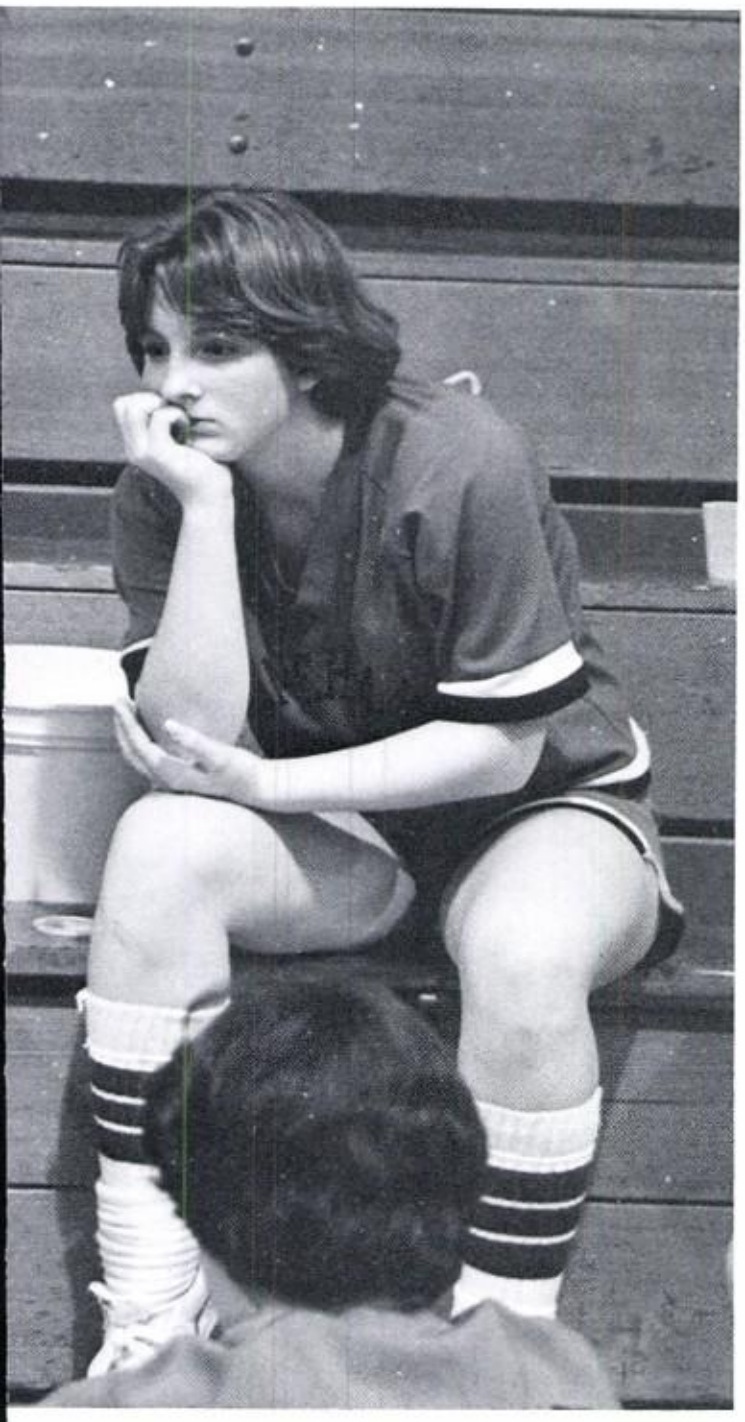
The agony, pain,

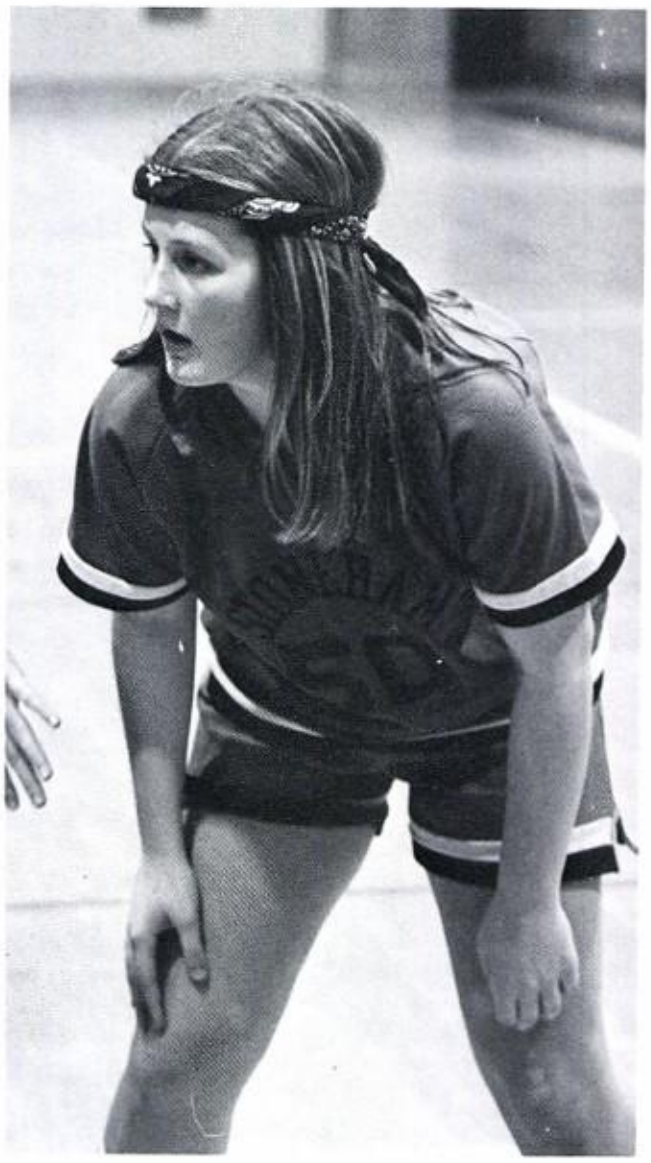


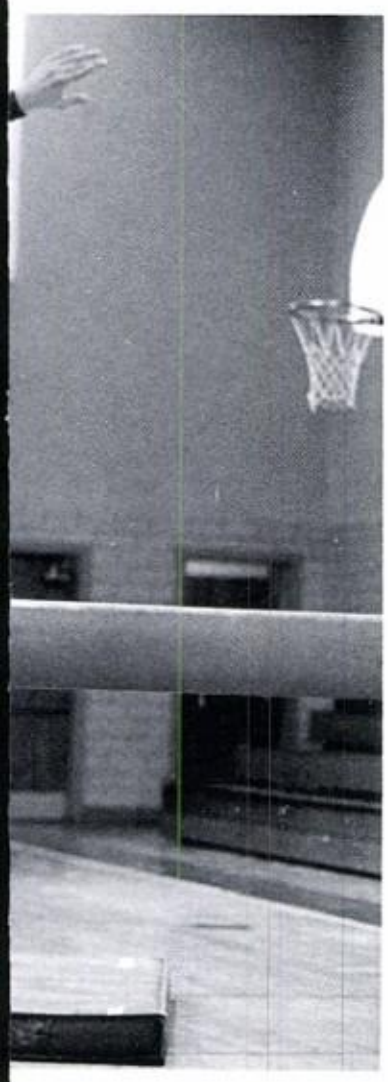




and thrill of sports







An excellent 78-79 hockey season was due to a total team effort. Captain Bill McDonough enjoyed another productive season with the help of his linemates Scott Boretti and Bob Simpson. In addition to the Spartan's first high scoring trio, the Spartans boasted two other fine units: Paul Ginivan ably centered for wingers Neil Yianacopolus and Tony Maffeo. The third wave, "the Matignon Connection," placed John Burke between brother Steve and Paul Girouard. Other forwards included Paul Schepis and Brian McAteer. Blue liners Paul Deflumari, Steve Hunt, Frank Sommonetti, Mark Nazarian, Bob Weizorek, and Tom Duff were other contributing factors to the winning season. The last line of defense was aptly provided by net minders John Folan and John Erico. The season was highlighted by a stunning comeback victory over the top ranked Burlington Red Devils. A 7-4 win over Melrose avenged an earlier defeat. Overall the Spartan season should be looked upon as a successful one. They were a young, hustling sextet who hold much promise for the future.

Stoneham had three members on the All-Star Team: Jim Abbott in the 45 yard dash, John Jessop in the 600 yard run, and Gerry Mahoney in the 45 yard high hurdles. Other Stoneham members in the All-Star meet that placed were Mark Marasca, Ed Tibbets, Clam Calcavecchia, and Mike Skerry.

The Stoneham girls' varsity basketball team entered the season with a strong desire for going to the states. Captains Terese Kwiatkowski and Ann Dillon guided the team's first two games into the win column. Even though the town's traditional rival is Reading, the girls had a greater desire to beat Lexington, the Middlesex League champions. Rallying to the finish in the season's most exciting game, Stoneham lost by three points in the final thirty seconds. The team consists of seniors Terese Kwiatkowski, Ann Dillon, Julie Zani, Rosie Abbott, and Andrea Reis, juniors Patty DeCola and Susan Dion, with talented sophomores Chris Palotta and Renee Noone. The team was coached by Mr. Mike Kennedy with assistant Mrs. Carol Mucica.

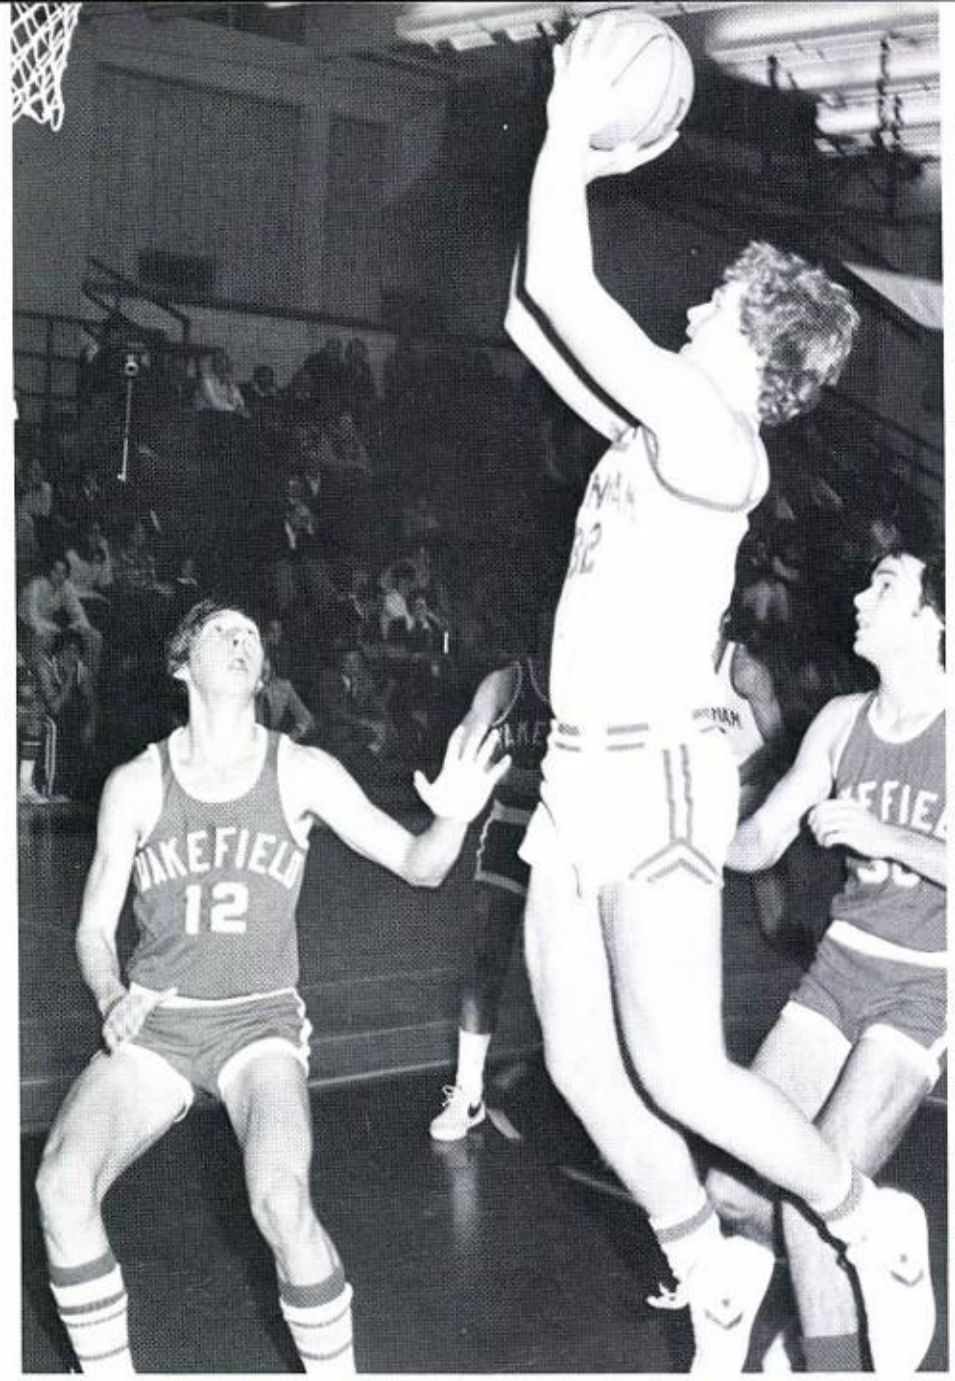
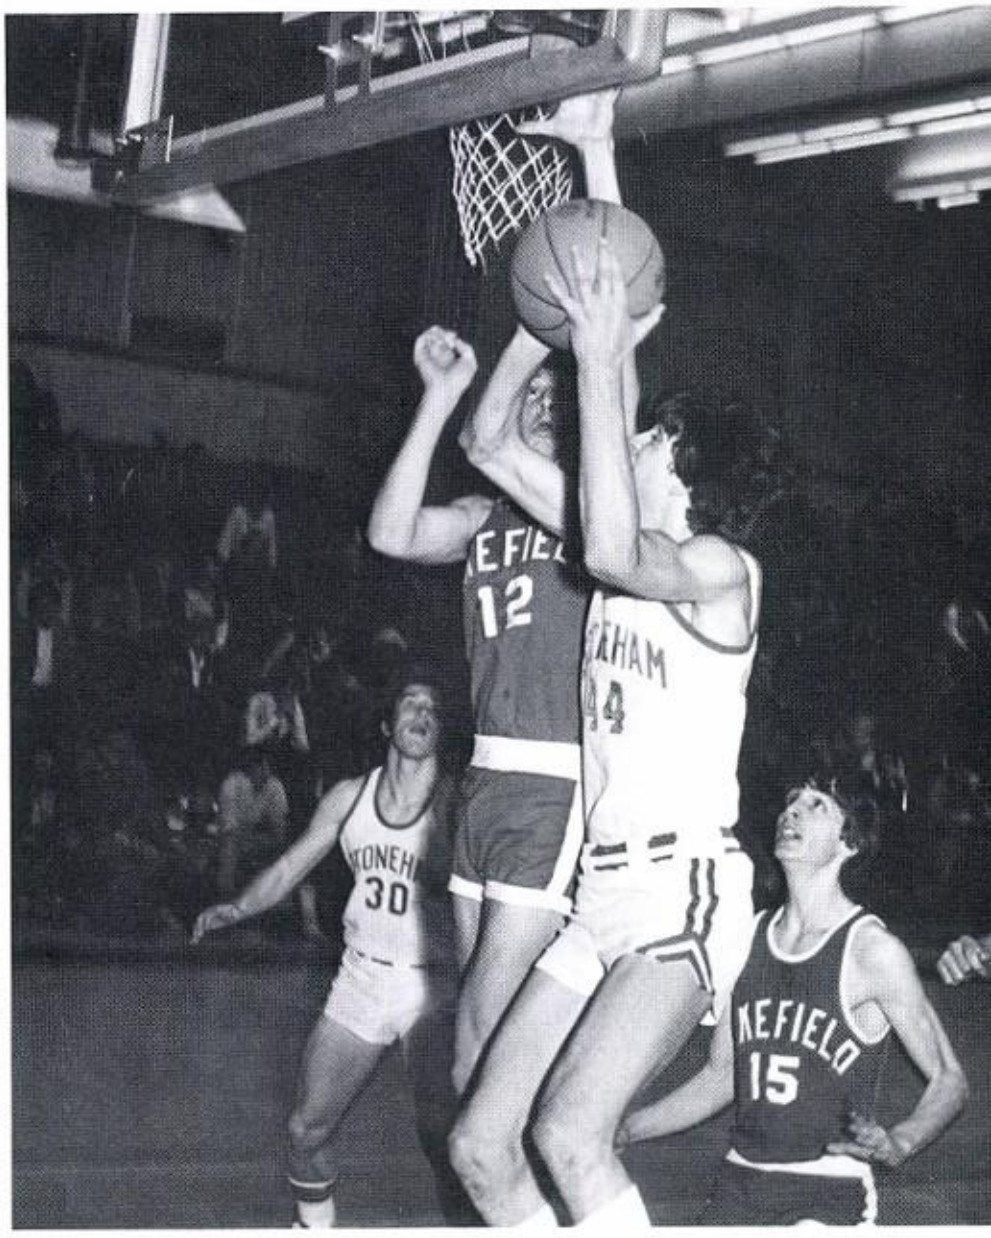
Hoopsters Break Even





Jack Belcher puts it off the glass for two. John Cloutier takes advantage of an open baseline. Paul Decola rips down a defensive rebound. Jack Belcher drives through the lane for two. Todd Olson dribbles into position to set up a play. Mike Zizza takes the ball up the middle. Coach Tavernese gives team members a new strategy. Ed Vargas lays one up as Jack Belcher waits for a possible rebound.

With a strong backbone of eight returning lettermen, and a summer league championship to their credit, the Varsity basketball team had high hopes of attaining a league title. A problem arose in the coaching staff, however, which hindered the team's performance. Fortunately, the team pulled itself together in the latter stages of the season and finished 9-9, the best win — lose percentage the team has had in three years.

Stoneham gymnasts swing into action

The 1978-79 girls gymnastic team had a great season, breaking many of the former high scores. Although the girls did well, and personal achievements were record breakers, the team's record was not as good as it could have been. Under the direction of coach Cynthia Carbone, the team worked hard and dedicated themselves to perfecting routines. The team consists of all around performers Tracy Marx and Robin Maligodi, seniors Patty Morely and Nancy Clabby, and several underclassmen.

Life at SHS is not restricted to the academic experience. For many people important aspects of the High School experience are the extra-curricular and social activities in which they involve themselves. Student's extracurricular interests range from travel to student government to merchandizing, with countless others in between. There is an organized group to satisfy almost any interest, and if a student can't find a suitable club, one can always be started.

On a snowy April 7th, the Junior Prom of the Class of 1979 took place at the Hillview Country Club in Reading. The music supplied by Skyelight featured Billy Joel's hit "Just the Way You Are", and provided an outstanding atmosphere for a night which brought pleasure to many. The food, however, consisted of chickens which never should have come home to roost and the dramatic highlight of the evening was Bob Columbus's misadventure with his chair.

The Political Spectrum of SHS . . .

The main objective of the Senior Class Officers was to make the last year of SHS enjoyable for all students. With the joint efforts of Alison Leonard (president), Mary Carr (vice-presicent), Bob Columbus (treasurer), Karen St. Amand (secretary), Ann Dillon (social chairperson), and Tina Padur (social chairperson), they carried on many successful senior functions under the experienced direction of Miss Broderick and Mrs. Leamon. The activities ranged from small money raising ideas like the spirit chain to the heart-warming Senior prom and Senior week which comprises of class day, Senior Banquet and Senior Assembly. In addition to the annual senior class functions, the officers tried not only to involve the entire school, but the community as well. For instance, despite the Alumni Association's refusal to sponsor the traditional Homecoming Day festivities, the Senior officers proceeded to undertake the task. Working countless hours, they brought the event to a success. Quite apparantly, with a continuous year of excelling achievements, the Senior Class Officers made the last year a more memorable one.

Student Council

The student council organizes student activities during the school year. The council serves the high school community by taking the responsibility of conducting student elections and registering students for these elections. They annually revise the student handbook, and sponsor non-school projects such as blood drives, Globe Santa, and Toys for Tots. Since the council is in charge of many fund raising activities such as the annual Carnival Ball, Carnation Day, and Donkey Basketball, they not only promote school spirit but provide scholarship awards to graduating seniors. Advisors Mathison and Mulvihill provide guidance for the organization made up of seven elected representatives from each class along with the three class presidents.

For those who wish to play a directive role in their educations, the Student Advisory Council (SAC) gives high school students a way to influence Board of Education decisions. Students in regional and state councils, as representatives of their high schools, discuss educational issues. The views of the council are taken by the chairperson, who is a voting member of the State Board of Education. Members of SAC learn about laws pertaining to education and learn how to apply the laws within individual schools. SAC is another important link between those who educate and those who are being educated.

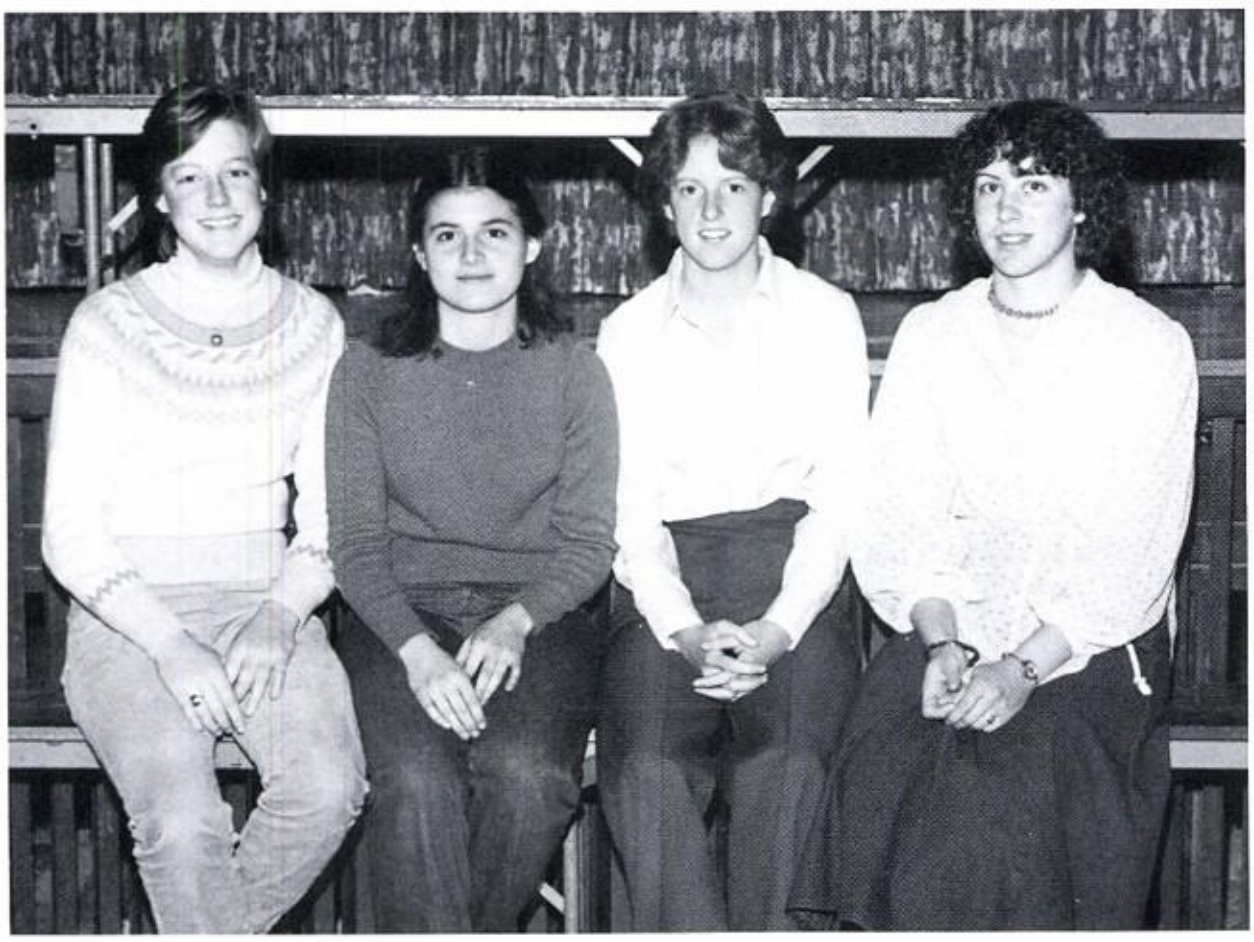
Girls' and Boys' State

Girls' and Boys' State is a program which is sponsored annually by the American Legion, the purpose of which is to educate selected High School Juniors in the duties, rights, and responsibilities of American citizenship. Students in their junior year who meet the requirements of good citizenship, leadership, scholastic achievement and extracurricular involvement live together for one week in model communities of towns, cities, and countries. Mock government at local and state level is practiced in order to give a view of how actual governing bodies operate. Mary Carr — state senator, Alison Leonard — lieutenant Governor, Dana Coombs, Steven Hunt, Chris Chambers.

School Committee

Rosemarie Abbott, Donna Columbus, Jane Donnelly, Peter Bracciotti and Richard Saitz represented the high school on the school committee. These five students worked with superintendent Daniel Hogan, Asst. Supt. Frank Matarese and committee members Mr. Mangerian, Mr. Kellog, Chairman Mr. D'Angelo, Mrs. Wallace, and Mr. Rosa by offering opinions and fresh points of view in relation to school policy. Committee members may make decisions regarding students with no idea of students' positions on important issues.

The five representatives hope that they had a positive influence on the school committee by increasing their understanding of the attitudes and feelings of the student body.



N.E.M.D.S.C. (Northeastern Massachusetts Division of Student Councils) is established for letter communication between member schools, for the exchange of ideas on Student Council activities. Through conventions held twice yearly, members are educated about types of school policy, educational laws, and methods of communication between school administration and student councils. The organization elects officers, each from a different school. Stoneham has had students elected as officers for the past three years. In 1977, Alison Leonard held the office of treasurer, and was succeeded in 1978 by Mary Carr. Members of N.E.M.D.S.C. include: Mary Carr, Melanie Smith, Maryjane Warren, and Alison Leonard.

Behind Blue Doors saw a lot of growth in this its third year in existence. Under the direction of a new advisor, Mr. Kevin Conroy, along with five associate editors, the newspaper achieved a more sophisticated style of reporting relevent issues such as discipline, grades, open campus, fashion, school news, and sports. The paper was entered into several journalism competitions, including The Suffolk University Contemporary Journalism Competition, but won no awards. By studying different styles of writing, and by applying their knowledge, the staff continued to answer the question, "What goes on Behind Blue Doors?"

Seeds, the Stoneham High School literary magazine, provides an outlet for the creative talents of the student body. The magazines contains poetry, fiction, and work and photography from both students and faculty members, as well as occasional selections from alumni. The proceeds of the sale of the publication are used to provide awards in recognition of achievement in the field of creative writing. Often the rewards seem slight compared to the accomplishments, but experience pays off, today Seeds; tomorrow the world.

Faith Raifman is a journalist for the Boston Globe, one of the nine high school students who write monthly for a focus Program. Faith, an editor in her junior and senior year for the school's newspaper, was chosen on the basis of her articles which were submitted by the previous advisor, Katherine Chase. Writing for the Globe, she chose the change in teen fashion and the intergrating of Special educational students within public high schools. Faith is planning a future career in journalism.

The setting: Purfleet, north of London, the decorative but sterile interior of Arthur Seward's (Mark Leavitt) Combination Convalescent Home and Insane Asylum. Dr. Seward and his staff, the bouncy Mr. Henessey (Nick Turco) and macho Nurse Beulah, (Karen Miasserian) have enough on their hands with the slippery escapades of their prize inmate Renfield (Mike Brebner) an insect-eating schizophrenic, without having to worry about Dr. Seward's slightly sloshed sister Sybil (Maria Gentile) who on the mental stability scale is only one step removed from the asylum herself. But above all, the doctor's main concern is the patient placed under his care by the rising young architect, Jonathan Harker, (Ed Coutu); Harker's fiancee who is suffering from what is apparently anemia, the onset of which coincides mysteriously with the arrival of a stranger who has moved in across the valley: a foreign count, an expirate of Transylvania named Dracula (Steven Scarpa). Is there a connection between the two? It is up to an old friend of the family, the rumple-suited elderly Professor Heinrich Van Helsing (Paul Perry) to prove that Dracula is in fact a vampire, a corpse still half alive who has blood thirsty designs on anyone who stands between himself and Mina, upon who he has less than honorable intentions.

Chorale acclaimed nationally

Top to bottom, left to right: Mr. Frank Abrahams, Spartan Chorale, Rosemary St. George, Bach Concert, Michael Zizza, Mary Beth Murphy. This year's Spartan Chorale is really psyched to hit the performing scene. Last year's group accomplished many great performances including: Ridgewood and Washington, D.C., but this year's showing should be as good if not better than last. This year's performances include: the annual Prudential Tree Lighting Ceremony, A separate Chorale concert featuring Bach's Magnificat, and The Carnival Ball.

The Spartan Chorale was chosen by the Music Educators of America, to take part in the July 4th activities in Washington, D.C. The trip was highlighted by visiting many famous tourist attractions, and the day was capped off with the annual Chorale Banquet at the J.F.K. Center for the Performing Arts.

SERENADE THE CROWDS . . .

A band, whether it be concert or marching, is really and collectively a group of individuals giving their talents and abilities to create a total unified product; that product is music. A small group of Spartan instrumentalists combined with a new band leader, Mr. Dennis Walter, performed exciting shows of kicks and twirls at Saturday football games and pep rallys. The band and its contingent of majorettes, pom-pom girls, and flag squad practiced daily for a competition at Lowell (third place in C division), numerous holiday parades, and their annual bazaar. However, the Jazz Ensemble is primarily a musical organization for highly talented instrumentalists. The music is complex, therefore, all interested student must audition. The judging is based on tone, sight-reading dynamics and pitch. The pieces that compose the band are trumpets, trombones, saxaphones and a percussion section. These students perform at the annual carnival ball, a yearly competition at the Berklee Museum.

Interact club is an important link between SHS and the community; this organization provides international goodwill and social services such as food baskets, foreign exchange programs, and the Ruth Timpone Scholarship Fund. Most importantly, students learn to work in an organized and business-like manner that will produce benefits for all Stoneham Citizens.

Learning experiences for students at SHS extend outside the classroom for members of the Tutoring Corps, a group of women with strong intentions of becoming elementary and special education teachers. Under the direction of Partricia Norelli and Cathy Broderick, the students visit surrounding elementary schools devoting time and giving help to the children while gaining valuable experience.

Future Secretaries

Left to right: Carol Smith, Lisa Mazzerian, Barbara Murphy. Students with similar goals in the business field learn to use various machines, and plan projects. Advised by both Ms. Corum and Ms. Garuti, these girls represent a valuable service organization to school personnel; the students help teachers with typing, duplicating, and collating materials. As do most clubs, the Future Secretaries give two to three scholarships to worthy graduating seniors.

Stoneham High School students interested in the retail, fashion, and advertising aspects of business join the Distributive Education class which enables them to become members of the national youth group, DECA. As members of the Distributive Education Clubs of America, students of similar career interests are trained to be future leaders for marketing and distribution by testing their occupational skills and knowledge while gaining practical experience in the business world.

While active DECA members gain, the High School also benefits from the productivity of the club and its involvement. Toys for Tots is one example of the various community projects DECA sponsors. From such work, honors and widespread publicity emanate, while adding to the pride of Stoneham High School.

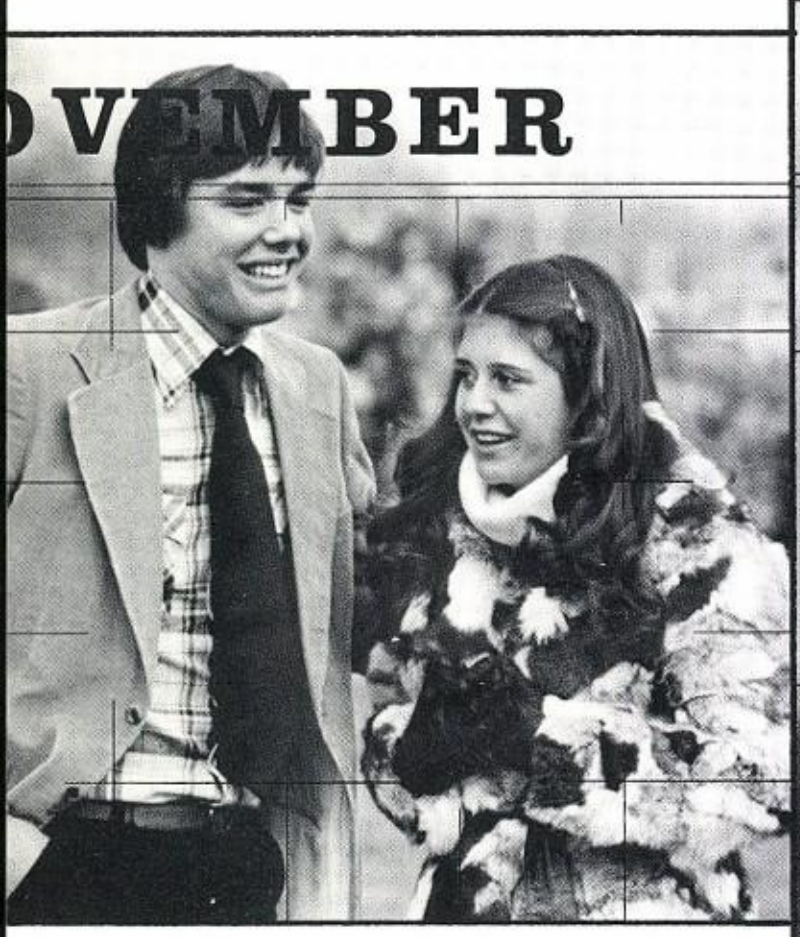
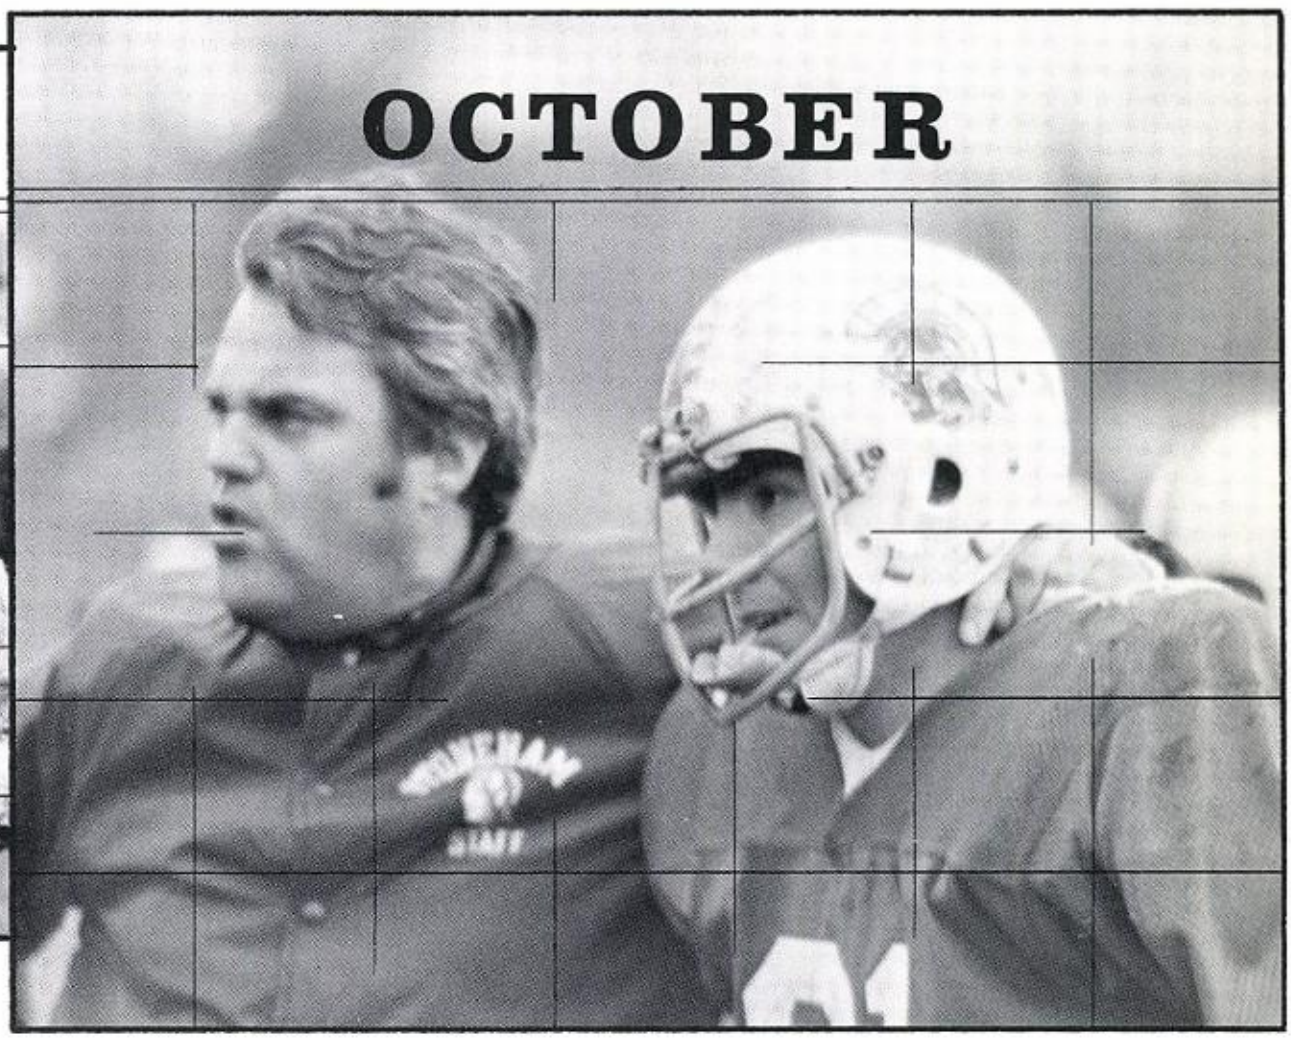
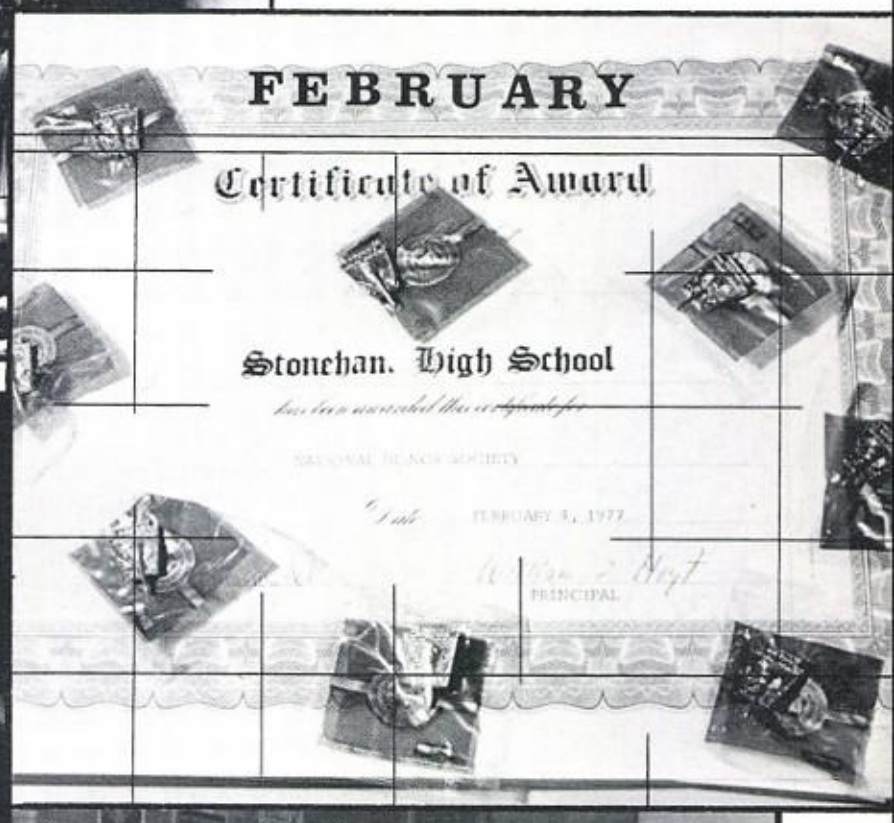
1978-1979
In Retrospectrum





In retrospect, our senior year brought excitement, entertainment, challenge, and reward, all of which gave rise to a sense of unity within our class. In September, the Blue Doors reopened to usher in the new school year and all its events, but for members of the SHS football team, the year began as early as August. Under the direction of Coach White, the Spartans plundered the fields of surrounding towns in October, cheered on by Stoneham fans. Unfortunately, in November, our men were defeated by Reading on Thanksgiving. Our class float, "The Land of Oz," and Miss Homecoming Laura Antonucci, along with Homecoming Queen Jan Penny, however, guaranteed a fun and exciting day for everyone.



December rang with Christmas bells and the combined voices of the Spartan Chorale which performed the Bach"Magnificat" under the direction of Mr. Abrahams. A highlight of January was the selection of outstanding scholars who were to be inducted into the National Honor Society; also during this month many combined efforts of Mr. Hoyt, Ms. Kominowski, and tentative members insured a smooth, meaningful presentation of awards and pins to the new members. Then in February the gold drapes at Stoneham High opened to display the 1979 Winter Carnival Ball, a superior talent show which took place before the royal court and queen Patricia Morely and king Gerard Mahoney. March signaled the end of winter as warm weather prevailed and Carnation Day brought a little spring to SHS.

Sunny April found students, faculty, and parents becoming closer as the women students of SHS formally entertained their mothers at the annual Senior Tea. Later in April, formality and elegance united as seniors donned tuxes, top hats, gowns and capes to attend the Senior Prom at the Chateau de Ville in Saugus. All too soon, the twelve years of education came to a close, and on June 3, 1979, the chapter of our lives at SHS ended and was replaced by a fresh new page for each of us to write upon with our future.
